East's Hopes For More Gas At This Time Are Blasted

A, B and C Coupons Cut to 3 Gallons In Midwest and Southwestern States

Hopes of immediate gasoline relief in the East were officially squelched late yesterday as Acting Price Administrator Chester Bowles announced that only a downward revision of gasoline coupon values in the Middlewest and Southwest will be made now to obtain gasoline for possible changes of driving restrictions in the East by September 1.

The announcement climaxed 48 hours of widely circulated reports indicating that proposed gasoline cuts in the West would bring a simultaneous increase of gasoline driving allotments in the East and elimination of the pleasure driving ban.

Acts to End Confusion

When leaks and rumors mounted overnight, Bowles decided to issue the full story at once to prevent further confusion among local rationing officials and the general public.

On basis of leaks that the Middle West and Southwest would lose a gallon of gasoline, and disregarding supply, reports were that this gallon would be used to help raise Eastern gasoline allotments and also would obviate the need of the pleasure driving ban which already was not strictly enforced in anticipation of rationing changes.

The new rationing changes were originally timed for announcement Sunday by Bowles over the Blue Network from 8:15 to 8:30 p. m., (E. W. T.), Bowles said he would speak at this time probably devoting more time to explanation and a plea for cooperation.

Bowles disclosed that the value of A, B, and C gasoline coupons in the Midwest and Southwest will be reduced from four gallons to three gallons effective 10:01 a.m. Monday. He stressed that if the ban on nonessential driving in the 12 northeastern states is observed during the balance of August, the ban can be lifted on September 1.

Hardship Cases Aided

"It is our further hope," he added, "that if sufficient supplies can be built up in the East, some increase in the value of coupons in the 17 Atlantic Coast States and the District of Columbia may be made later in September."

Bowles also disclosed that, effective Monday, local rationing boards in the East will have the authority to grant drivers more gasoline than is provided by the maximum B book for driving to and from work in hardship cases. Boards outside of the East have had this authority all along.

At present, A coupons in the East are set at 1½ gallons a week, and B and C coupons at 2½ gallons. As

Ickes Seeks Coal Miners Now in Army

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes disclosed yesterday he had requested the War Manpower Commission to arrange for the release from the Army of miner-soldiers to enable him to step up production in the Pennsylvania anthracite fields and the soft coal fields of the Pacific Northwest.

Shortages of anthracite have forced Ickes to decree a 10 per cent cut in consumption of hard coal for home heating use, while the fuel shortage in the Northwest has threatened to make rationing of coal necessary in that area.

The War Department which already has furloughed several thousand nonferrous metal miners to return them to the production of strategic war metals is known to oppose such measures to relieve manpower shortages.

A likely alternative to the return of inducted miners was believed to be an order for a six-day, 48 hour work week in the mines, to replace the present six-day, 42-hours week.

Meanwhile, regional and area War Manpower officials worked on application of a new manpower control program scheduled for announcement late today. Late edi-

Youth Slays Twin Boys 'For Heck of It'

Psychopath Also Confesses Another Cleveland Attack

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Aug. 13.—A reform school parolee led police today to the bodies of Charles and James Collins, 13-year-old twins and declared he shot them "for the heck of it," Detective Inspector Frank W. Story reported.

Police found bodies of the twins, missing more than 24 hours, lying face down in a wooded section of Bay Village, east of Cleveland. Bullet holes were in the back of their heads.

Story said Henry Hagert, who will be 18 next month, confessed the slayings. The detective added the youth had served an automobile theft term in Lancaster, Ohio, Boys Industrial School and recently had been released from the psychopathic ward at city hospital here. No charges have been placed against Hagert.

"I shot them for the heck of it; I didn't like them," Story quoted the youth as saying after a lie detector test broke down his earlier claims that he knew nothing about the boys' disappearance.

Story said Hagert also confessed a Wednesday night degenerate attack on Jack Buchanan, 9, son of City Food Inspector E. B. Buchanan. The Buchanan boy was found dazed in a field at suburban Westlake Village.

Story quoted Hagert as saying he picked up the twins in his automobile yesterday as the boys were hitchhiking to the golf course.

Acting on a tip that a sedan was touring Bay Village, Cleveland and Lakewood detectives took Hagert into custody. A .32 caliber revolver was found in the car, Story said.

Byrnes Rechecks U. S. War Buying

A reexamination of all Government purchases of both civilian goods and war materials to be shipped abroad is being made by War Mobilization Director James Byrnes, it was learned yesterday.

Particular attention is reported being paid to foreign commitments for food and oil. Insiders predict that the food buying program for foreign consumption may be reformed as a result of the investigation.

Staff Chiefs Of U.S. Arrive In Quebec

Activities Indicate Roosevelt and Churchill Parleys Will Soon Begin

By the Associated Press

Quebec, Que., Aug. 13.—American chiefs of staff arrived here tonight, and their presence suggested that momentous war conferences between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill of Britain soon would begin.

Their arrival gave a new spark of life to Allied war talks which had been lagging perceptibly since Churchill left here Wednesday night and turned up the next morning in the United States.

The American chiefs of staff include Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff of the Army; Admiral Ernest J. King, Commander in Chief of the Fleet, and Gen. H. H. Arnold, commanding the Army Air Forces.

Leahy and Somervell

Also arriving here were Admiral William D. Leahy, President Roosevelt's personal chief of staff; Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, Chief of the Army Service Forces.

An official communique also announced the American party included Brig. Gen. John R. Dean, secretary for the United States chiefs of staff, and Capt. Forrest Royal of the Navy, deputy secretary.

Marshall, King, Arnold and Leahy are the American representatives on the combined British-American chiefs of staff, a permanent war organization of the two great Allied countries.

The surveys of the war situation around the world between the Americans and their "opposite numbers" of the British armed services and those to be conducted by the President and Prime Minister may bring into existence the final decisions on tactics and strategy needed to crack open Hitler's European stronghold and to bring the war closer to the islands of Japan.

Date of Parley Hidden

It still could not be announced when the American Chief Executive and Churchill would start their deliberations officially.

The strategy parleys here have fallen into two distinct phases. The first began with Anglo-Canadian conferences, which still were going on today. The second will

N. Y. Child Saved By Drug Pencillin Doing Fairly Well

New York, Aug. 13 (AP).—Two-year-old Patricia Malone, for whom a New York city editor and his staff obtained the rare drug penicillin to help her fight a blood disease, was "doing fairly well" tonight.

Patricia, suffering from the staphylococci type of septicemia, had a brief respite from temperature during the day but it rose during the afternoon, her nurse said.

City Editor Paul Schoenstein of the Journal-American Wednesday obtained from Government officials release of the drug, now manufactured only for the military service, when doctors gave the child "only seven hours to live." Police of two States escorted it from the E. R. Squibb & Sons research laboratories in New Brunswick, N. J., to the hospital here.

City to Stay Hot, Is Forecast; Showers May Help Farmers

Continuing warm and humid weather for Washington and the vicinity was predicted for today by the Weather Bureau.

At the same time it was forecast that scattered thundershowers may give some relief to the drought-stricken farmers of Maryland and Virginia.

If the shower forecast proves true, farmers may discontinue their harvesting of unripened crops to allow them to benefit from the expected rain.

Indications are, however, that drought conditions will return to the rural sections early next week.

Yesterday's high was 90 at 3:20 p.m. The day started out to become a real scorcher at 8:30 a.m. when the temperature stood at 75 and the humidity at 87. But by 2:30 the humidity had gone down to 58 and this acted as a counter-blow to the rising temperature that finally hit 90 shortly.

Another heat prostration occurred in the District yesterday when Mrs. Josephine Givens, 67, 2138 California st. nw., collapsed on the street in the 2000 block of S st, nw. She was treated at Emergency Hospital and discharged.

Allies Capture Randazzo, Nazi Stronghold; Foe In Frantic Flight

By Daniel De Luce
Associated Press Sports Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Aug. 13.—Hard-driving Allied troops today stormed and captured Randazzo, pivotal Axis stronghold in the heart of the northeast Sicily front, after United States soldiers had smashed through a desperate German rearguard in violent hand-to-hand fighting.

The middle of the fast-diminishing Axis defense lines on the Messina bridgehead suffered total collapse as the American Seventh Army lunged into the highland town from the west and north, followed by British troops smashing up from the south.

Although most of the German defenders tried to struggle eastward to the coast in the vicinity of Taormina, ace German grenadiers, in big numbers, were believed to be facing capture in the area. At the same time British troops menaced the Taormina area as they thundered up from the south along the coast on the other side of Mount Etna.

Nazis in Frenzied Flight

All along a 20-mile road from Randazzo to Taormina, the Germans were in frenzied flight, with Allied troops at their heels.

The Americans reached the ruined city's edge by nightfall yesterday. The German rearguard engaged them, and after a savage hand-to-hand fight the Yanks rushed into the shell and bomb-torn town at 9:35 a.m. (3:35 a.m. EWT) today.

The conquest of Randazzo was likened to the capture of Tunis in the African campaign because it smashed open the few remaining communication lines available to tht Axis forces, and threw the Germans back toward their final narrow peninsular foothold in Sicily opposite the toe of the Italian boot.

At the same time U. S. and British troops were pushing hard upon the German flanks within 30 miles of Messina at some coastal points.

Many Prisoners Taken

By squads, platoons and companies the prisoners straggled in, boosting to more than 130,000 the total captured during the five-week-old Sicilian campaign.

The German high command accelerated the withdrawal of troops to the Italian mainland and Allied fliers dubbed Messina Straits "Flak Alley" in recognition of the strong antiaircraft defenses emplaced along the shores.

The American spearhead, twice hurled into the enemy's right flank from the sea for sensational gains totaling 25 miles since Sunday, was the nearest Allied force to Messina.

The British Juggernaut on the east coast climbed slowly but surely over mountainous enemy defenses on the heights of Mount Etna and virtually passed this volcanic obstacle 35 miles from Messina.

These were the highlights of the developments aground:

1. Randazzo was occupied.
2. A famed division of Lieut.

U. S. Bombing Raid on Rome Sets Fires; Rail Yards Blasted

RAF Gives Milan And Turin Heaviest Pasting; Berlin Hit

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), Aug. 14.—British Mosquito planes bombed Berlin Thursday night while big RAF bombers made the heaviest attack yet made on Milan and Turin in northern Italy, and Swiss dispatches early today indicated that northern Italy may be under attack once more by the RAF.

A Reuters report from Zurich this morning said an alert had been sounded in western Switzerland—usually an indication that northern Italy is being bombed.

The Air Ministry said that more than 1120 tons of bombs were dropped on Milan alone Thursday and that the attack in the north was "in greater strength than ever before." Seven bombers which soared across the Alps from Britain were lost of the mighty armada of probably 1000 raiding planes.

Turin also received a heavy load of bombs. Besides cradling such war potentials as the Fiat aero engine factories, the Italian Royal Arsenal and chemical and other

Every One of 500 American Planes Returns in Safety

By the Associated Press

Smoke and fire billowed over historic Rome yesterday as hundreds of American planes in their second raid of the war there poured more than 500 tons of bombs on military objectives.

Waves of Africa-based Flying Fortresses, Mitchells, and Marauders showered their explosives on the San Lorenzo and Littorio railway yards of the Italian capital, the same targets which an American force of 700 planes partrially wrecked July 19.

While five aircraft were lost in the first assault, not a single one failed to return from yesterday's attack by perhaps 500 planes.

Repulse Attempted

Sky battles raged over the city during this second raid as between 40 and 50 fighters attempted to halt the all-American assault, but the fliers pressed their attack home with precision accuracy.

Crewmen reported seeing tremendous explosions and smoke surging upward to more than 3000

Hatch Urges Equal Status For Air Power

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

A unified service command, with the air forces placed on an equal footing with land and sea branches, yesterday was urged by Senator Carl A. Hatch of New Mexico, ranking Democratic member of the Truman Defense Investigating Committee.

The New Mexico Senator, long an advocate of a single armed service combining all branches, said he hoped to see equal rank given air power in the President's war councils as a step toward a unified command.

Hatch substantially indorsed the position taken by The Post in its appeal to the President for an all-air staff with a chief at its head rating equally with Army and Navy.

"Dealing Death Blows"

"The air services are now dealing the death blows," said Hatch. "You can't exaggerate the importance of air power. Let us have clouds of airplanes and control of the air so we can blast Hitler's European fortress from the inside."

Hatch said development of long-range, heavy bombers capable of striking directly at the heart of the Japanese homeland from distant U. S. bases is equally important, and "I have every confidence that this is already being attended to."

The New Mexico Senator originally called for a unified service command following a tour of de-

Food Rations Of Army Cut to Aid Civilians

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 13.—A food conservation program calling for uniform feeding of all American soldiers—to cut costs and make more food available to civilians—was outlined today by Army spokesmen.

Col. R. F. Carter, executive officer of the subsistence branch of the Quartermaster General's Office, said orders would be issued, probably within the next three weeks, placing all Army units on field rations "and reduced field rations at that."

Army spokesmen emphasized that the program contemplates a change to a uniform system of feeding, but that soldiers will receive virtually the same kind of foods—and "as much or more" variety.

Under the Garrison ration plan, Army companies are allotted a certain cash allowance per man and may obtain any kind of food desired. The field ration system is based on a master menu specifying certain foods for all on one day, but allowing for variety through the week.

Will Cut War Cost

One of the purposes of the program, Army spokesmen said, was to conserve food by having the men eat all the rations that are prepared for them, without waste.

Col. P. P. Logan, assistant chief, subsistence branch of the Office of the Quartermaster General, said that the conservation program would be a big factor in reducing the cost of the war.

"The number of field rations will be reduced by application of a sliding scale," Colonel Carter explained at an Army Service Forces food conference. "Deductions made in the number of rations issued will be based on the estimated strength for rations of a unit as follows: 100 men or less, no change; 101 men to 250 men, deduct 5 per cent; 251 to 1000 men, deduct 10 per cent, and more than 1000 men, deduct 20 per cent."

Wounded Yanks at Halloran Enjoy Banter on Their Plight

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Staten Island, N. Y., Aug. 13.—Unless wounded soldiers change after they leave the hospital, due possibly to the way they are accepted by civilians, those coming home from this war will fit back into the American scene just as fond as ever of banter and the comics, and more than ever in love with their country.

Certainly that is the picture here at Halloran General Hospital, where youngsters returning from North Africa look upon themselves not as unfortunte victims of enemy bullets, but as lucky and experienced travelers back from a far-away country peopled mostly by "Ayrabs," a race of individuals "who'll wear anything for clothes."

With silver bracelets for their girls worn jangling on their "dog chains," they talk with matter-of-fact objectivity about the jeep accidents and machine gun bullets that downed them, display the autographs on their arm and leg casts, and plan flourishing futures. War may have taken their legs and put them in bandages, but it could not dent their self-confidence.

The only indication that some of them may dread the readjustment period is in the fact that few of them have explained their wounds to the homefolks. But that seems to be due to their concern for the homefolks and not to fear for themselves.

"I've got to let my girl know I've lost a leg," a young private from New Hampshire told a newspaperwoman in the group of reporters who visited a ward full of newly returned yesterday. "Would you mind writing her I am wounded, but okay? Then I will follow that up with the details. I don't know just why I haven't written."

The visitors arrived just as the soldiers were getting their first American haircuts and shaves in a long time. A Red Cross girl had already made pencil sketches showing some of them in their "war beards," and the Gray Ladies had given out red and white leather strips from which they could braid

New Baikoko Advance

Japs' Salamaua Base Wrecked By 177-Ton Air Bombardment

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in the Southwest Pacific (Saturday), Aug. 14.—Japan's menaced air base at Salamaua, New Guinea, has been laid in ruins and its key portion, built out on an isthmus, "has virtually ceased to exist" as the result of a 177-ton bombardment by heavy and medium Allied planes, Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced today.

The shattering air blow was the latest in a series which have hurled more than 1000 tons of explosive and incendiary bombs on that northeastern New Guinea enemy base.

Announcement of the destructive aerial thrust was coupled with another of a new advance of a mile at the other end of the 750-mile battle arc in the Pacific against the last foothold of the Japanese on New Georgia Island at Bairoko Harbor.

This advance occurred near Zieta village, which is roughly 4 miles from Bairoko harbor and about half way between the harbor's encircled enemy garrison and the Munda air base, which the Americans captured August 5.

Resuming a Solomons aerial offensive after a brief lull caused by bad weather, fighter-escorted bombers destroyed or severely damaged 32 out of 42 Japanese bombers and fighters caught on the enemy's big airdrome at Kahili on Bougainville Island.

Nazis Issue Ruthless Order In Evacuation

German Soldiers Told To Bring Weapons, Shoot Way Through

By the Associated Press

With the British Eighth Army in Sicily, Aug. 13.—The German evacuation from Sicily, already under way, will be guided by a ruthless German order—dated as far back as July 29 and captured recently by the British—which branded most Italians useless militarily.

"No Italian, whether civilian or soldier, may interfere in any way with the movements of the German armed forces," said the order issued to the Hermann Goering Panzer Division. "All Italian motor vehicles and heavy weapons will be removed from the roads ruthlessly. This does not apply to units which as part of the division have proved their worth in battle and carry on in the fight."

The order said "anyone not cooperating will be shot" and commanded that "no demolitions or road blocks are to be manned by Italian personnel."

"Every German soldier who is forced to take to the (Italian) mainland must be in possession of infantry weapons," the order went on. "Apart from pistol and bayonet he will carry a rifle, machine pistol or light machine gun with ammunition or in the case of sections one medium machine gun or mortar. These weapons are the tickets for the ferry. Without these, the soldiers will be ruthlessly prevented from crossing.

"Any motor transports, weapons and equipment that cannot be transported across must be demolished. Destruction by fire is strictly forbidden since fires and traces of burning are liable to attract attention of enemy aircraft both day and night. Blowing up is the most effective method of destruction and will be applied to weapons as a matter of principle."

Normandie List Drops As Pumps Are Speeded

New York, Aug. 13 (AP).—The list of the former French liner Normandie was officially recorded at 35.4 degrees today, a drop of 1.1 degrees since last night, as 94 pumps were accelerated to remove the last 30,000 tons of water.

Reds Close In On Bryansk; Smolensk Goal Of New Drive

By Edward D. Ball
Associated Press Staff Writer

London (Saturday), Aug. 14.—Russian troops smashed through a 31-mile section of the central front yesterday to open an important new offensive against Smolensk with gains up to 13 miles, while other Soviet forces stormed to within a mile of tottering Kharkov and closed in on the middle key base of Bryansk, Moscow announced early today.

Capture of these three German strong points on a 500-mile front would crack the entire Axis defense in Russia and probably force a general retreat to the Dnieper River line.

The new offensive—the third Russian drive opened this summer—was a two-armed push from north and south of Spas Demensk, 85 miles southeast of Smolensk on an important rail line. In three days' fighting the unchecked Soviet legions shattered the German lines in two great gaps of 22 and 9 miles each and swarmed through to capture Spas Demensk and Pavlino, only 73 miles from Smolensk.

100 Towns Captured

More than 100 towns and villages were captured in the break-through, and in the toppling of Spas Demensk alone more than 2000 Germans were killed.

Other Russian troops are 60 miles from Smolensk on the north in the Velikie Lukie area.

Soviet artillery massed before the strong German defenses softened Nazi resistance, said the Moscow midnight communique. The Russian Air Force also supplied an air blanket for the charging troops, knocking down 42 German planes.

Kharkov was a doomed city as plunging Russian columns wiped out last-ditch German defenders and captured Bolshaya-Danilovka, a mile to the northeast and the first suburb out of the great Ukraine industrial center.

4000 Nazis Killed

"The enemy is offering desperate resistance in an attempt to stop the advance of our troops," the communique said. "However all German efforts are failing and are only increasing the already huge losses that the German army is suffering in the battle around Kharkov."

In one sector of this seething front 4000 Germans were killed in three days and the Soviet forces took as booty 12 tanks, 67 guns, 347 machine guns, 70 mortars, 30 radio transmitters, 63 miles of telephone cable and eight dumps of supplies, the bulletin said. Many prisoners also were taken.

In addition to their advances from the northeast and southeast, Russian troops on the semicircle strangling Kharkov were 8 miles away on the north, 20 miles on the east and less than 30 on the west.

Far to the northwest and west of Kharkov, where subsidiary drives were menacing Sumy and Poltava, German tanks and motorized infantry launched a fierce counter-attack in the Akhtyrka area, an-

Duce Lost on Sub Trying to Escape, N. Y. Paper Says

New York, Aug. 13 (AP).—The New York Post said today that, "according to reports in circles frequently very well informed, Benito Mussolini, Italy's ex-duce, drowned like a trapped rat during a vain attempt to escape from Italy."

The Post, which declined to give any further information as to its sources, said the reports indicated Mussolini had embarked in a submarine from an Italian port, "probably Leghorn," shortly after his fall from political power.

"The submarine reportedly was spotted by Allied airmen, who bombed it repeatedly and sent it to the bottom," the Post story continued. It added that details of the reported incident were not made clear.

Rome Crowds Shout To Pope for Peace

New Rocket Bomb Rips 7-Inch Steel

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 13.—A Russian rocket projectile which may foreshadow a revolution in plane firepower was described today in a Swedish technical report as capable of piercing 7 inches of armor plate, although it weighs only about 50 pounds.

The data was believed obtained from a Lagg plane which the Finns captured and allowed Swedish technicians to examine.

The report said the projectiles were launched from a three-rail rack fitted under each wing of the Lagg monoplane. Drawings indicated that the missile is about 2 to 3 feet long, and 6 or 7 inches thick and looks like the conventional air bomb.

"A case is known where this weapon was used in aerial combat and it is stated that hits have been registered up to 600 meters (1968 feet) range," the report added.

The big problem of putting heavier guns on planes has been the recoil and muzzle blast effect, and so far the 40-millimeter cannon mounted on tank-bursting Hurricanes are the largest known to be in use.

If rockets which start slowly with a minimum of recoil and then gain speed could be adapted to planes, this problem might largely be overcome and enable planes to discharge missiles equal to the destructive power of heavy field guns.

Pontiff Besit As He Prays Amid Ruins From Raid

By the Associated Press

At the Swiss-Italian Frontier, Aug. 13.—Thousands of Italians clustered around Pope Pius XII today and shouted to him for peace when the Pontif visited the bombed areas of Rome after the second American air attack, it was learned here tonight.

Other reports said that residents of Milan—the target of an RAF attack early this morning—had demonstrated later against the government of Marshal Pietro Badoglio and its failure to get out of the war. Turin also was bombed.

The American air fleets which today made their second heavy raid on Rome showered leaflets along with explosives, reminding the Italians that the war continues even though Mussolini is gone, said the Swiss Telegraphic Agency.

Crowds Surround Pope

Stefani, the Italian news agency, said in a Rome dispatch that the Pope was the object of tumultous manifestations both at Piazza Lodi and St. John Lateran Church, where he knelt amidst great crowds for prayers after the raid.

The Swiss telegraphic agency reported that powerful explosions were heard in the vicinity of the Colosseum, but that it had not been confirmed whether this important architectural area had been damaged.

Church Reported Hit

The agency declared that today's attack was more important than the July 19 raid. Reporting that numerous bombs fell in the quarters of Tuscalano and Tiburtino, the agency said the Church of Our Lady of Loretto was reported badly damaged.

Tiburtino flanks the switchyards and Termini railroad station which were heavily hit in the July 19 raid.

From the Swiss-Italian frontier a smoke pall still could be seen hanging over bombed Milan. According to reports reaching here, Milan remained paralyzed late today as soldiers and firemen continued to battle fires and dig into wreckage. Milan newspapers described the attack as "the most violent of the war."

Fewer Labor Disputes Are Reported in South

Atlanta, Aug. 13 (AP).—Labor disputes in the South are relatively few compared to the rest of the Nation, Dr. John R. Steelman, director of the United States Conciliation Service, said here today.

"This is due in a large measure," Dr. Steelman said, "to a better understanding between labor and capital and the condition is increasing."

plants, Turin is an important railway junction through which traffic with Germany must pass.

The attack on Berlin, the sixty-eighth of the war, was executed by the swift wooden Mosquitos. The attack was minor compared with the smashes on Rome, Milan and Turin, but it served the purpose of awakening Berlin's populace, 4,300,000 before evacuations began, and further fraying Nazi nerves.

Berlin is undergoing partial evacuation since saturation attacks almost obliterated Hamburg. Many Hamburg refugees have fled to Berlin and told the story of their city's fate. Thus the Mosquito raid seemed aimed in part at German morale, since it was not in great force.

Nights are lengthening, however. The moon over Berlin will be full on August 15, and the R. A. F. has implied strongly that Berlin is due for the same pounding that was given to Hamburg.

Ships, Railways Bombed

Besides their man objectives, the British attacked airfields at Dijon and St. Dizier and blast furnaces near St. Omer. All are in France. Shipping off France and the Low Countries and railways were bombed. Intruder planes shot up 19 locomotives, a critically short article in Hitler's arsenal. A mine sweeper and motor torpedo boat were sunk in Dover Straits.

The bomb deluge on Milan was crammed into 30 minutes, and when pilots were crossing the Alps en route home they saw a huge pillar of smoke over the city. They said fires were well concentrated in the area, which includes the Caproni aircraft works, the Breda arms works and tire and aircraft engine factories—among other things. Milan was last damaged on Saturday night. Crews were quoted by the Air Ministry as saying last night's raid was "an outstanding success." Swiss reports said peace demonstrations broke out.

The Turin attack also was packed into a half-hour and this city's defenses were swiftly saturated. The most destructive raid on Turin previously was on July 12.

Watchers on the Swiss border 37 miles from Milan could hear the explosions and see the glow of fire.

The RAF's heavy bomber force sent against Milan and Turin looked like a great aerial parade as the big bombers streamed across the English sky for hours after dusk on the way out.

First reports had 13 planes of the great force missing from all RAF operations, but later reports reduced this number to 7. Some of the planes landed at other fields than their home bases. They may have continued on to Africa.

A suggestion that the Allied aerial offensive had extended into virgin territory came from the Berlin radio. This report said "enemy planes" flew over southwest Hungary. No bombs were reported to have fallen.

Japs Reported Preparing 3 New China Offensives

Chungking, Aug. 13 (INS).—The Japanese are preparing for new offensives in China, a Chinese army spokesman declared today. He predicted that the present lull would be broken shortly.

The Japs are reinforcing their air strength in central China, he pointed out, enlarging airfields and storing up gasoline and weapons. Information indicates that the enemy may launch offensives in the region of the Chekiang-Kiangsu-Anhwei border, around the Shantung-Honan-Kiangsu border and a third in the Liuchow Peninsula-Kwangtung section.

Maryland Soldier Wounded in Action

The name of one Maryland man was included in a list of 160 United States soldiers wounded in action which the War Department released yesterday.

Private First Class John L. Duble, whose father, J. W. Duble, lives in Graceham, was wounded in the South Pacific theater, the announcement said.

American Fliers Leave Fires in Rome and All 500 Planes Return Safely

feet as the Allies resumed their attempt to bomb Italy into submission by destroying the railroad yards and airfields in the Rome area.

The Berlin radio broadcast a dispatch from Rome that Allied planes, striking in two waves, dropped both explosive and incendiary bombs on the Italian capital—blasting approximately "the same quarters" as in their first attack on July 19, and leaving large fires raging in the outskirts.

Claim Pope Watched

The dispatch said that Vatican circles reported Pope Pius XII watched the raid from the window of his private room.

"After the raid, when visiting afflicted quarters of Rome, the Pope, a Bishop of Rome, knelt in the Piazza Lodi with an enormous crowd and prayed," the dispatch said, adding that "in the Piazza San Giovanni, he again knelt on the steps of the Cathedral of Rome in prayer," later returning to Vatican City.

Again the fliers struck just before noon after minute instructions to avoid religious or cultural targets in the city which is the seat of the Roman Catholic Church.

Some of the lighter bombers skimmed in at low levels, low enough to pour tracers into the smoking rail establishments which form strategic bottlenecks for war supplies to German and Italian troops in Sicily and southern Italy.

Oil Tank Exploded

The Littorio yards were attacked by two waves of Mitchells and three waves of Marauders.

The strong fighter opposition, contrasting with the lack of enemy resistance in the first raid, failed to ward off precision bombs from Flying Fortresses, which crashed through the roofs and hangars of administration buildings at the San Lorenzo yards.

The crews were unanimous in reports that no damage was done to Rome outside of the railroad yards and airdromes which had been set as objectives.

"I did not see one bomb outside the target area," said Flying Officer Robert Butler of Naples, Minn., a Marauder pilot.

Fulfillment of Threat

The raid was very heavy but may not quite have equaled the proportions of the first raid, on July 19, when more than 500 bombers escorted by 200 fighters unloaded 1100 tons of bombs on railways and airfields.

The first Rome bombing was executed when Mussolini was holding his thirteenth and last conference with Hitler in northern Italy. Shortly afterward, he fell from power.

The new attack, coupled with the unprecedented smashes at turbulent Milan and Turin in the north, was interpreted as an Allied demonstration to the Badoglio government that Italy indeed would be "seared, scarred and blackened from end to end" as Prime Minister Churchill promised, if she did not surrender and oust the Germans.

This last attack was driven home without the accompaniment of special statements such as characterized the first raid.

The raid was executed by the strategic air force commanded by Maj. Gen. James H. Doolittle.

The navigators, many of whom participated in the July raid, again were given stringent instructions to avoid the proximity of churches, shrines and historic monuments. The bombardiers were forbidden to release their bombs unless they were absolutely certain they had the targets clear in their sights.

The hazards from anti-aircraft fire and fighters were increased by the enemy's almost certain knowledge that railroad yards and airfields would be the only objectives.

Today's huge bomber fleet was escorted by an unannounced number of Lightning fighters.

The first waves of Flying Fortresses went in high over the San Lorenzo target soon after 11 a.m. At approximately the same time, medium Mitchells and Marauders roared in at low levels to drop their bombs and spray the already flaming target area with tracers.

Highway for Nazis

The San Lorenzo yards in the east central district of Rome connect rail traffic between Florence in the north and Naples to the south. The Littorio yards serve the Genoa traffic. Heavy German military traffic has been pouring through the two yards.

Other heavy, medium and light bombers from the Northwest African and Middle East commands, meanwhile, contributed the weight of their bombs and the sting of their tracers to the all-out Allied effort to force Italy from the war.

RAF Halifax and Liberators from the Middle East dumped heavy loads of explosives on railway sidings at San Giovanni on the toe of Italy, just across the Messina Straits from the Axis bridgehead in Sicily.

Medium Marauders and Lightnings sprinkled scores of fragmentation bombs on dispersal areas at the Grazzianisi airfield, one of the enemy's fighter bases north of Naples, while Mitchells with an escort of Lightnings bombed the Crotone Rosetello and Crotone Cocologa airfields on the sole of the Italian foot near Taranto Gulf.

Ammunition Dump Hit

At Grazzianisi seven out of 25 challenging enemy fighters were shot down and returning Allied airmen claimed a hit on an ammunition dump. A huge sheet of flame was seen shooting skyward, they said, and a large explosion was observed.

Other Allied planes carried out patrol missions over Sicily and struck at enemy ground concentrations, entrenchments and artillery positions in the Barcellona, Falcone, Patti and Navara sectors.

Randazzo Falls; Axis Line Cracked

Gen. George S. Patton, jr.'s U. S. Seventh Army, capitalizing on the second seaborne flanking movement of the week Wednesday, captured Cape Orlando and the nearby towns of Naso and Brolo, and scored an eight-mile advance on the north coast.

Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's British Eighth Army—paced by the 50th Northumbrian division—gained four miles on the east coast and is threatening Taormina, the harbor and highway junction 25 miles south of Messina, it was announced.

Randazzo, dominating a mountain pass through which runs a highway to the east, was one of the strong points upon which the German high command depended to delay the Allied rush against the evacuation beaches along Messina Straits.

German remnants falling back back before the American coastal drive had no natural defense lines before Marian di Patti, 28 miles west of Messina, and roads, highways and bridges on their routes of retreat were shelled yesterday by U. S. warships in one of a series of Allied attacks from the sea.

(The Berlin radio broadcast a declaration by Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, Nazi military correspondent, that "contraction and consolidation of German-Italian bridgehead positions is progressing according to plan.")

From 35 to 50 vessels of various sizes were seen at one time yesterday in the narrow waters, only two miles across at one point.

"The enemy evacuation by small boats across Messina Straits is quickening, although no full-scale evacuation has yet started," an authoritative Allied statement said. "This is extremely difficult traffic for the Allied air force or Allied warships to halt, although constant attacks are made by both service arms."

Among the prisoners newly rounded up was another high-ranking Italian officer, General Fiumara of the Italian Napoli (Naples) Division. A report to headquarters added, a trifle obscurely, that the general was captured "with donkey."

Kurile Raiders Flew Leisurely to Targets

Pursuit Planes Blast Jap Bridge

ATTACK IN BURMA—Yank airmen in Assam converted their P-40 pursuit ships into "B-40's" and dropped 1000-pound bombs on this Burma railway bridge, over which the Japs have been sending vast stores and many troops.

Enemy Planes Are Caught on Ground In Midday Attack

Adak, Alaska, Aug 12 (Delayed) (AP).—Heavy Army bombers which loosed 18 tons of bombs and 4500 pounds of incendiaries on Japan's northernmost naval and air base at Paramushiro yesterday came in at 12,000 feet and "took their own sweet time" in picking targets, returning pilots said today.

Of the nine raiding planes, two did not return to Attu, but they may have made emergency landings on Russia's Kamchatka Peninsula, which is within sight of the Japanese-held Kurile Island stronghold.

(The refernce to Attu was the first mention of that captured base in connection with the Paramushiro raid. Attu is approximately 765 miles from Paramushiro, or about 135 miles nearer than the American air base on Amchitka Island.)

Although the American raid was in midday, enemy fighter planes were caught on the ground. An estimated 40 got into the air, however, and overtook our slower bombers. In a heavy aerial battle which lasted 45 minutes over a distance of about 125 miles five of the enemy were shot into the water for certain and others probably were downed.

American bombers, who first raided Paramushiro July 20, were over the target for 19 minutes—from 12:11 p. m. to 12:30. Anti-aircraft fire was heavy but inaccurate, and came mostly from warships in Paramushiro Straits and the harbor.

There were no casualties on the seven planes which returned safely, but one came in on three of its four motors.

The planes were from the Eleventh Air Force, commanded by Maj. Gen. William O. Butler. The following results of the two Paramushiro raids were tabulated:

In the first, carried out by six Liberators, 30 quarter-ton bombs were dropped from 18,000 feet.

In the second, the nine Liberators dropped 72 quarter-ton demolition bombs and 25 incendiary clusters. Forty-five quarter tons and 15 clusters were dropped on the Army supply base and the remaining bombs and incendiaries on naval base targets.

Hatch Suggests Equal Air Rank

Senator's Statement

Hatch produced a copy of a speech prepared for the Senate on August 10, 1942. The speech was never delivered but was released as a statement to New Mexico newspapers. Hatch quoted the following lines from it as foursquare with his views today:

"First of all, I do not want to be critical of the leaders of our armed forces. The men I have met on the whole appear to be active, alert and keenly aware of the dangers of the present crisis. Vast progress has been made and is being made. One almost marvels at some of the things which have already been accomplished. The cooperation between the various branches of the services I have found to be good.

"Yet, I am strongly convinced that we cannot rely upon cooperation alone. I have returned with the strong conviction that all division in the armed forces of this Nation must be completely eliminated if our military objectives are to be attained. The day must quickly arrive when there will be but one army of the United States.

For Unified Command

"In that army must be included all the land, sea and air forces. In that army of the United States all men should wear the same uniform. All forces should be under the same command. Everywhere I went, I found the people of this country practically united in the thought I have just expressed."

In yesterday's interview, Hatch said he hoped this goal could be reached in the not distant future, "but at least we can make substantial progress toward it." He said an air chief, having equal rating with Army and Navy staff heads, "would certainly be a step in that direction."

American Chiefs Of Staff in Quebec

start tomorrow when the American and British staff chiefs meet.

The Anglo-American huddles are expected to center around military matters, primarily, and therefore to be a direct continuations of the Casablanca meeting last January and the Washington meeting last May.

That appeared to many observers to be the chief reason why Russia did not get a bid to the Quebec conference, assuming that a Moscow statement that no invitation had been received by the Soviet government is accurate.

Hull's Explanation

Officials here offered no confirmation that Russia had not been asked to sit in on the Quebec parleys.

[Secretary of State Hull indicated in Washington that the Russians would be told of what goes on.

[Replying to reporters who sought confirmation of the Tass (official Soviet) news agency report that no Russian representative had been invited, Hull said he had not looked into it closely since President Roosevelt personally handles such matters.

[He had no doubt, however, the Secretary continued, that the heads of the United Nations were keeping abreast of one another on all phases of their respective situations and attitudes.]

Canadian Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King played host this evening at a reception for persons attending the war talks.

Upon their arrival in Quebec tonight, General Marshall was received by Lieut. Gen. Kenneth Stuart, chief of the Canadian General Staff; Admiral King by Vice Admiral Percy W. Nelles, chief of Canadian Naval Staff, and General Arnold by Air Marshal L. S. Breadner, chief of Canadian Air Staff.

U. S. Bombers Raid Burma

New Delhi, Aug. 13 (AP).—American Mitchell bombers of the Tenth Air Force concentrated on river transport and bridges in central Burma yesterday sinking one river boat and damaging others, a U. S. Army Air Force communique said today. One bomber is missing.

Russian Army Now Only Mile From Kharkov

Soviet heavy bombers ranged ahead to pound Poltava and Krasnograd on the approaches to German defenses at the Dnieper River. Some of the heaviest fighting on the entire Russian battleground centered around Karachev, 28 miles from Bryansk. In the past week, a Russian military commentator said, in a broadcast, over 1000 towns and villages have been captured on the approaches to Bryansk, which is the hinge between Kharkov and Smolensk. More than 60 towns and villages were reported wrested from the Germans near Bryansk.

German Version

Far from preparing the German home front for the fall of the city, Berlin asserted that Kharkov was in no way threatened.

"No fighting is going on in the neighborhood of Kharkov, military quarters said," according to a Transocean Agency broadcast recorded by the Associated Press. "Heavy fighting is going on southwest of Belgorod. It was emphasized that the German front continues to stand. The enemy had achieved no decisive success in his great objective of reconquest of the Ukraine."

"German troops frequently encountered British and American war material, but this material was not found to be in really large-scale quantities," Transocean said. The Germans asserted the battle along the winding 500-mile active front from Smolensk to Kharkov was "increasing in violence."

Moscow and Berlin agreed that both sides were using new divisions in the climactic battle for Kharkov.

Warning to Reich

Gen. Devers Sees Invasion Over Channel

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 13.—Lieut. Gen. Jacob L. Devers, commander of U. S. forces in the European theater, told graduates of the Army's Officer Candidate School today that the day will come when the Allies will "cross these narrow waters and strike the enemy with all the force at our command."

(The "narrow waters" of the English Channel and the North Sea separate England from the Continent.)

"That invasion will continue until Nazi Germany is a dead page in history and Nazi armies have surrendered unconditionally," the general declared.

"The war is being carried to the enemy by our Eighth Air Force in day and by the Royal Air Force at night and day after day and week after week it is being intensified.

"You must prepare yourselves and your men to follow up this destruction and complete the conquest."

Nazis Moving Berlin Offices

London, Aug. 13 (INS).—The German foreign office and ministry of propaganda have been evacuated from Berlin to Vienna to escape Allied bombing raids, Reuters reported today.

The German war office, it was disclosed, has been evacuated to an unspecified town in southern Germany.

D. C. Man Helps Drop Leaflets on Sicily

Lieut. Livingston Hartley, U. S. N. R., whose observations on world affairs appeared frequently in columns of The Post from February, 1935, to December, 1941, is now in Sicily helping bombard enemy lines with informative leaflets, the Associated Press reported yesterday.

A propaganda expert in civilian life, Lieutenant Hartley, 2906 N st. nw., described the bursting of Allied shells in midair to "shower the leaflets down like a snowstorm." Lieutenant Hartley is now stationed with the Seventh Army near Randazzo, Sicily. His wife, Mrs. Louise R. Hartley lives at the N street address.

"Prisoners have said they read the leaflets and were impressed by them, but it is impossible to say how many surrenders they are responsible for," said Lieutenant Hartley.

The pamphlets are fired into enemy territory after it has first been raked by heavy gun fire.

Recreation System

Reconsideration of the status of Washington's golf courses, swimming pools and similar facilities now operated through private concessions was foreordained with the creation of the local Recreation Board. That board has been in operation a little more than a year now, and it has already written a new chapter in the history of public recreation in the Capital. It appears to be fully competent to direct the city's entire recreation program, and we believe that it should have supervision over all the city's recreation facilities.

At present the golf courses, pools, bicycle and boating concessions in question are under control of the Welfare and Recreation Association. There seems to be no reason why they should not be tied in with a city-wide recreation program. If operation of these facilities is assumed by the local government, it is understood that they would be maintained by the National Capital Parks along with other playgrounds under control of the Recreation Board. That suggests economy. Restaurants in the golf clubs could be operated by the Welfare and Recreation Association which already has charge of the cafeterias in Federal buildings. This too might result in economy as well as in a proper division of functions. And if revenue from operation of these facilities is forthcoming, it certainly should be going into the hands of the Recreation Board for further development of the city's parks and playgrounds.

The committee named by the Recreation Board to investigate the proposed transfer of these facilities may encounter some practical difficulties that will influence its decision. But we do not see how it could reasonably do otherwise than work toward the merger of the facilities in question with the city's recreation system.

Sinatramania

Out in Pasadena the other day a mob of several thousand very young girls screamed, fought and clawed one another, pulled hair, bit people on the arm, in the hope of getting a fleeting glimpse of Mr. Frank Sinatra. When the police, to save him from being smothered to death by these hysterical admirers, led Mr. Sinatra to a garage and bolted the doors, the girls almost pulled the place down in their effort to get near him. Many of them fainted from what seems to have been sheer ecstasy.

There was nothing at all unusual about this. It seems to happen everywhere that Mr. Sinatra goes. A great many earnest students of human behavior, including psychiatrists, psychologists, pedagogues and journalists, have undertaken to explain the phenomenon, but none very plausibly. We ourselves have not yet seen Mr. Sinatra or heard him sing, but we have it from rather trustworthy observers that he is a rather commonplace looking young man, and that his singing voice is considerably less than remarkable. Some critics even deny that he is a singer at all, and say that he tends rather to recite his songs, much as though he were making love to somebody from a pay-station telephone booth. This no doubt makes it all very intime, but there is scarcely anything new about that. It is at least 100 years since theatrical managers discovered that it was better box office when Romeo spoke his lines to the audience rather than to Juliet.

What, then, is all the excitement about? Some say it is just the war. With nearly all the young men away at camp or the front or at sea, there is nobody much left for the girls to go wacky over but Mr. Sinatra. Others, including some supposedly mature women, say that Mr. Sinatra is such a frail, boyish and ingenuous looking fellow that you just can't help wanting to mother the poor kid to death. Still others say it is just the general emotional unbalance of these calamitous times and ask us to remember the Children's Crusade and the Dancing Mania of the Middle Ages. All that is no doubt true, but it strikes us that we may be getting a little more perturbed than is really necessary. This may indeed be a case of mass neurosis, but if so, we have been neurotic for some time. Before Mr. Sinatra there was Mr. Harry James, and before that Mr. Bing Crosby, and before that Mr. Rudy Vallee, and before him there was Rudolf Valentino, and a long time ago there was Mr. Francis Xavier Bushman. A lot of the gals who used to become delirious at the mere thought of Mr. Bushman might have been better off as "farmerettes" and in making love to tomato plants and bean vines back in 1918, but they didn't see it that way. Some of them lived to become mothers of the gals who are now going wacky over Mr. Sinatra.

Atlantic Charter

The document which President Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill signed off Newfoundland Bight on August 14, 1941, was not born as the Atlantic Charter. It grew up that way. Originally the manifesto was simply "a statement of peace aims," and its baptism as the Atlantic Charter occurred naturally as people everywhere recognized its signal importance. The word Charter carried the weighty and permanent connotation which the declaration bore in the hearts of mankind. Even then there were those who objected to the word Atlantic as too restrictive. Were not the teeming millions of Asia left out by definition? These objectors were appeased only when authoritative assurances appeared that the word Atlantic was merely descriptive of the place of signature and that the entire world was embraced within the four corners of the august pact. Subsequently the Charter was made universal by the adherence of other non-Axis nations, including Russia and China.

The joint declaration, even though it was signed before America entered the war, gave form to the crusade against Japo-Hitlerism. A credo was needed. A man will fight well against something he hates, but his strength is as the strength of ten when he is fighting for something. Only by such a means can the offensive spirit be ignited. Up till then the Nazis and the Japanese had held the initiative in the ideological as well as the military sphere. They professed to be establishing new continental orders to take the place of the fragmented sovereignties which had simply brought on poverty and discord by competition. They intended to go further, and at least Hitler had confessed to the ambition of erecting a Pax Germanica in place of the "decadent pluto-democracies." Those aims filled every German and Japanese soldier with religious zeal. The Atlantic Charter came along as a dynamic to oppose the dynamic of these New Orders. It conveyed the suggestion of counter-revolution, and it is only by counter-revolution that revolution can be suppressed.

This is still how mankind regards the Atlantic Charter on its second birthday. To be sure, the declaration is interpreted variously, and the literal minded are often heard demanding an exegesis. But a statement of peace aims is not and cannot be a blueprint of the world which will rise out of the ashes of the present turmoil. It could not conceivably settle in advance all the multitudinous questions which will arrive for solution on the morrow of victory. Some of these questions not even the seer can at present discern. All of them will require for settlement the patient and evolutionary application of the intelligence of the wise men among the victorious nations. All that was intended on that August day in mid-Atlantic was to supply a civilized base from which to tackle the manifold problems of this troubled earth when the Axis nations have been overwhelmed. In other words, it was a pledge that there would be no ethical vacuum in the peace-making as in the fighting.

We can now descry more clearly than in 1941 where the emphasis will lie in applying the Atlantic Charter. Security must be our foremost concern. The eighth and last principle says that "pending the establishment of a wider and permanent system of general security," the disarmament of the enemy countries is essential. It is on these two points that action now is required. Disarmament and the general security demand a common policy among the victors and then a common policing. Another war is inevitable if the Allies do not plan now what they are going to do with victory. To make that victory stick is the job of statecraft. To make the world better as well as secure—which was the double aim of the Atlantic Charter—is the job of the peoples of this earth in applying what Woodrow Wilson used to call "the steady pressure of moral force."

Faulty Inspection

"Faulty manufacture by a subcontractor, faulty inspection by the prime manufacturer, and inadequate enforcement of inspection procedures." Such is the verdict of the investigators who inquired into the causes of the recent glider crash that took the lives of ten persons including the Mayor of St. Louis. The immediate cause of the accident was a defect in a metal fitting of a wing strut which was only one-sixth of the specified size. As a result of these findings, two Army Air Forces inspectors have been temporarily suspended, while 100 gliders manufactured in the St. Louis area have been grounded as a precautionary measure. An investigation by the AAF Material Command is also being made to determine to what extent the suspended inspectors can be held responsible for the failure to enforce inspection requirements.

The St. Louis tragedy is one of those infrequent cases in which ultimate as distinguished from proximate causes of an air accident can be ascertained virtually beyond the shadow of a doubt. In this instance, there appears to be no question that the accident resulted from faulty inspection procedures. It is not enough, therefore, to try to apportion the blame for this particular accident. What is needed is an inquiry to determine why the inspectors for the Army Air Forces fell down on their job. Did the fault lie with the type of men selected or is the inspection system of the AAF at fault?

The Truman Committee in a recent report on aircraft production criticized severely the laxity of the AAF inspection service at a plant manufacturing airplane engines, charging that defective and substandard material had been delivered to the Government. The committee concluded in that case that the inspection system as formally set up was adequate "if and only if, both company and Air Force personnel are sincere and honest in their efforts to produce a quality product." The pressure of production demands in time of war offers a constant temptation to relaxation of quality standards. It requires courage and determination on the part of inspectors, and above all, official support of their efforts to assure the kind of honest inspection which the Truman Committee stresses.

The preliminary inquiries into the glider accident raise the question whether a great many military plane crashes may not be caused by structural defects that adequate inspection would have disclosed. Perhaps a promised Truman Committee report on the subject of air casualties will throw some light on the relation of faulty inspection systems in the factories to accidents in the air. We hope the committee will press its inquiry without delay.

Falling Behind

Failure of the airplane manufacturers to keep abreast of the war production schedule set for them is still being attributed to complacency regarding the outcome of the war. Maybe the good news from the fighting fronts has been responsible for a little slackening of effort. However, there is no reason to believe that American workers as a class are so flighty or so ill-informed as to quit their jobs or scamp their work merely because we have made some progress along the hard road to victory. Furthermore, the production record itself is amazing. The complaints that are arising are due to the fact that the increase in output of planes has not been as great as the plans called for.

This newspaper, as we have said before, refuses to believe that the causes of that failure lie in any sudden access of complacency on the part of workers. To a dominant extent they are due to the Administration's failure to develop a manpower policy that would assure the placement of workers where most needed and prevent migration of workers employed on essential wartime jobs. For example, West Coast airplane factories are reported to be short of workers chiefly because they are drawn away by the higher wages obtainable in shipyards. The Boeing Aircraft Corp. at Seattle needs 9000 more workers, and because of this deficiency the production of much-needed Flying Fortresses has fallen off.

At this stage of the war it probably does little good to criticize War Manpower Commissioner McNutt for the failure of his belated attempts to prevent labor pirating. The question at present is what to do about it. Apparently, Mr. McNutt is powerless to prevent the exodus of workers from airplane factories. Indeed, even if he could detain them against their will, and force them to work at lower wages than those obtainable elsewhere, the effect upon worker morale, hence upon production, would be serious.

To attempt to level up wages in the airplane factories to those prevailing at the shipyards would, however, upset the "Little Steel" formula and constitute a serious threat to price stabilization. There remains as the most feasible solution of the dilemma: payment of incentive wages—that is, bonuses payable for increased production. With extra pay dependent upon larger output, costs per unit would be kept from rising and inflationary price increases would be avoided. According to The Post's correspondent, Selden Menefee, this is the solution that appears to be best suited to meet conditions at the Boeing Seattle plant and other plants confronted by similar conditions. Remedial action of some sort should at any rate be speedily forthcoming to arrest an exodus that, if continued, would have appalling consequences.

What Might Be

On Friday an individual who wished to be nameless paid $18 for two bottles of Scotch whisky at an auction held in the Appraiser's Stores of the United States Customs Service in New York. Irish whisky, vermouth, imported burgundy and sherry also went at fantastic prices that astonished the auctioneer. The explanation is simple: there is a superabundance of money and a limited amount of goods available for civilians. Excess money, in the hands of undisciplined people, will be used to bid up prices of goods recklessly, unless they are restrained. Fortunately, restraints do exist in the form of price ceiling regulations applicable to liquors as well as to more essential commodities. The New York auction prices serve as a reminder that without price control—defective though it is—consumers would be at the mercy of profiteers, who, like the auctioneer, would dispose of their goods to the highest bidder.

VERY GOOD IT IS

Very dark, very cool the wood,
Centered in the bright land,
Very sweet it is, very good,
Here to stand,

All-listening and all-looking, now,
With little to hear, to see,
Save a small sound on the bough,
And a tree, and a tree . . .

Nothing to startle eye,
To solicit ear,
And the heart, by and by,
Drops questing, here,

Where a single bird called clearly,
Once, and went,
But ear, eye and heart were nearly Asleep, and all content.

El Oro Rebuilt

ECUADOR WHOSE Independence Day the New World marked Tuesday, is due for increased attention as scene of an experiment that will have to be repeated on a tremendous scale elsewhere as Hitler's armies are pushed back through Europe. This is rehabilitation of a war-torn area.

Background to this New World prelude to one of our nearing war problems is that Ecuador's El Oro Province, in her far southwest, was laid waste when border trouble flared between Ecuador and Peru two years ago this summer. The peoples of the region, about 40,000 in all, had been becoming poorer for years as the witchbroom disease destroyed the cacao trees. When war came, they fled to distant jungle and mountain towns.

All the inhabited portion of southern Ecuador was directly involved. Ecuador as a whole, already suffering from war loss of European markets, was severely hurt.

The border dispute—one that had continued off and on for a century—was unsettled when Japan struck us. The American republics had been trying to get it settled for some time, as they had worked on similar wars between Bolivia and Paraguay and between Haiti and Santo Domingo.

Pearl Harbor

There was an important specific reason for this after Pearl Harbor. Six hundred miles due west of Ecuador lie her Galapagos Islands, ideal as bottom peg for a wide Panama Canal defense—or as take-off point for a blow against the Canal. The United States had wanted to put a defense base there for some time. The last thing we wanted was a South American war simmering near this spot.

At Rio an Ecuadorian-Peruvian settlement was finally arranged. In a separate agreement not made known for several months, Ecuador had already let us start fortifying the Galapagos, as her contribution to the hemisphere's military defense. At Rio all the republics promised to work together on economic and political, as well as military defense. Living up to this, the United States offered to help about El Oro.

The offer was accepted. The Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs was given the job to do, with an allotment of $500,000.

When the people of El Oro finished their long trek back home they found their towns choked by the swift growth of the jungle. There was little food and there were no tools. There was malaria and dysentery, but no doctors, medicine or hospitals.

The relief mission first sent in medicines by air. When they arrived there themselves, they found that thousands of the returned refugees were in danger of starving, that all were ill-nourished. Food was bought in the north of Ecuador and rushed in to meet the crisis. Tools were given out to the able-bodied men—machetes, shovels, saws, axes. El Oro had to begin at the bottom, cleaning streets, arranging sanitary disposal, repairing split-cane houses burned or fallen to ruin in the tropical rains.

Emergency Work

The emergency work began in March, 1942, and by July it was possible to launch a long-term program. This has three main parts—agriculture, public health and public works.

The biggest public works job was repairing the small Port of Puerto Bolivar, sea gateway for all southern Ecuador. The public health program includes a widespread fight on malaria and typhoid, with an intense campaign for elementary sanitation. A small, centrally located regional hospital has been built. Ecuadorians are being trained to carry on public health work after the mission is gone.

Teaching the people there to grow food crops is an important part of the plan for agriculture. Stock has been brought in. Farmers are backed with small loans, up to $100. For cash crops, the cacao industry is being revived and fiber growing started. Fiber processing and weaving is being started as a cottage industry.

Eight out of ten people of this region are sick. They live in a tropical climate, near sea-level. It has not been possible to send them more than the simplest tools. The rehabilitating mission has been small, 12 people at its largest. Yet in the year and a half since work got under way, wonders have been done. The people of the region are at work, raising their food. Farmers are repaying their loans. All Ecuador is feeling the relief.

El Oro not only shows how far a little help will go, it is also one of the world's shining examples of international collaboration in constructive effort.

Nineteen nations used moral suasion to stop a war there. As result, the New World built up defenses against outside enemies. I was in Ecuador soon after Rio and enemies within were trying to stir up dissatisfaction about the Rio settlement. For far less money than it would take to wage even the small border war there a few months, these critics have been silenced, a whole rgion is rebuilt and thousands of people are back on their feet. It is a pattern the world should note.

Japan And Russia

By Barnet Nover

Is Their Truce About to End?

FOR 12 YEARS Japan and Russia have faced each other across their joint border, the border separating Siberia from Manchuria, Outer Mongolia from Inner Mongolia.

Every mile of that border has been and remains a potential powder barrel. Indeed, since the Japanese overran Manchuria and Inner Mongolia in 1931-'32 innumerable Russo-Japanese "incidents" have occurred on both sides of the line. On at least two occasions the military forces of Russia and Japan even fought large-scale pitched battles.

In the meantime the tide of aggression and war has swept across several continents and many oceans, one result being that Russia today is the ally of Japan's enemies and Japan is the ally of Russia's enemies.

Yet, paradox of paradoxes, Russia and Japan have at all times during these 12 years remained officially at peace.

SO FAR AS OUTWARD appearances are concerned, Russia and Japan are, in fact, more truly at peace today than they have been for a long time.

The Japanese permit Russian ships, loaded with American supplies, to sail through the Sea of Japan to Vladivostok. The Russians permit the Japanese to fish in the waters off Kamchatka and are leaning backwards to avoid giving any offense to Japan. Thus in an officially authorized statement on the Quebec parley, Tass, the Soviet news agency, has declared that, because of the character of the conference the participation of any one representative of the Soviet government . . . was not and is not suggested."

This statement is undoubtedly a reflection of Russian anxiety to avoid giving the slightest color to Japanese suspicions that Russia intends to become a participant in the war against the island empire. Such suspicions, justified or not, would undoubtedly arise if the Soviet government participated in a conference at which plans for intensifying the war on Japan were formulated.

NOR IS THIS ATTITUDE on the part of the Moscow government at all surprising.

For the first time since she was attacked by Germany, Russia is successfully carrying out a summer offensive on the Eastern Front. Were Russia, at this moment, to be forced to take on Japan her chances of reaching the Dnieper this year would be lessened considerably.

More than ever, therefore, it is to Russia's interest to remain at peace with Japan. And insofar as peace with Japan enables the Soviet Union to concentrate the bulk of its strength against Germany it is no less to the interests of Russia's allies that she do so.

The worst thing that could happen to all of us—Russia, Britain, America alike—is for Germany to be vouchsafed a breathing spell, whether as a result of a division of Russian military might through the outbreak of Russo-Japanese hostilities in the Far East or from any other cause.

RUSSIAN ANXIETY to avoid giving offense to Japan at this time is further increased by the circumstance, clearly recognized in Moscow, that very powerful pressures are being exerted on Tokyo by Hitler and the German high command to join in the war on Russia.

Because Japan has resisted such pressures in the past we cannot assume that she will continue to do so indefinitely.

We can be sure that whatever Japan decides to do she will do out of considerations of self-interest and not because of any love for the Reich. The Japanese have as little use for the Germans as they have for us. But they are not blind to present realities. They realize that the defeat of Germany will mean the certain and probably the speedy doom of Japan.

For this reason and only for this reason they may decide that an attack on Russia at this time, an attack designed to ease the Russian pressure on the German army, is a risk that must be taken.

JAPAN HAS kept the flower of her army and a sizable proportion of her tank and plane strength in Manchuria and Korea, even though during recent months she has been forced to go on the defensive in the Southwest Pacific.

The purpose behind this action has been two-fold. On the one hand the Kwantung army has served as a defensive barrier against a Russian thrust to the south. On the other hand, the presence of this army in Manchuria and Korea has served to immobilize many Russian divisions which the Red Army could have used effectively in Europe. In that way Japan has helped out her European partner. But that Japanese aid has not been enough to make possible a German victory in Russia.

The Japanese policy of armed inactivity along the Siberian border has begun to run afoul of the law of diminishing returns.

THE FACT is that time is running out for the minions of Hirohito and they know it.

Our strength is growing in the Pacific as well as in the European theater. Perhaps we are now sufficiently powerful in the Pacific to take care of all contingencies, including a Japanese attack on Siberia. But we are certainly not as strong in the Pacific as we certainly shall be after Hitler has been knocked out.

Realizing that, Japan must decide soon what she is going to do about Russia. She may decide that the time for a successful assault on Siberia is passed, that such an attack would only hasten her defeat.

But we cannot discount the possibility that her decision will be in favor of aggressive action, however risky, since the situation along the Manchurian-Siberian border becomes increasingly unfavorable for her. Germany's desperate plight and her own growing difficulties may persuade the Japanese to seek desperate remedies. We shall soon see.

Wiser Parents

I am writing the following in answer to the letter on "Educating Parents" in this morning's Post:

Yes, dear mother, we mothers and grandmothers as well, should be trained and keep on being trained. When I became a mother I congratulated myself that I was sufficient unto my responsibilities.

Now that I am grandmother of one beloved grandson of 21 who is in the Army, I spend some of my sleepless hours during the night seeing my deficiencies during the past and regretting that I could have done better if I had known better.

There are in the world today channels through which our minds (and our minds are our greatest assets) may become continuously open to receive light sufficient for every need, making it unnecessary that the coming generations fall into the dark paths of experience of suffering through ignorance.

STUDENT GRANDMOTHER.
Kensington, Md., Aug. 4.

To John Doe's Mother

Mother of John Doe, do you really believe you are free. You are not as free as you think, for as long as there is breath in your body you are bound body and soul to the little bundle of love which you abandoned so thoughtlessly.

Johnny is in good hands now, but when the papers cease to print his picture, when no more news can be heard about him, you will then know what a conscience is—you will know what loneliness is and some day, you, too, will come to know what it is to be forsaken. Because some day you are bound to be forsaken also.

Be brave and strong; keep what is yours. That dear little baby needs you and you need him. Close your eyes for a second and imagine what it would be like to have and hold him once more—the baby you thought you would never again have for your own.

Let's Fight The Axis

All of us have heard the saying that the "sergeants" are the backbone of the Army, and without them the Army could hardly exist. May I make a suggestion? Why not take a few of these "backbones" and put them in the places held by these mighty "few" officials who are always stirring up trouble.

It is true they have high educations, college degrees, but I will bet one thing, if they did put some of these rough, tough and courageous men, who wouldn't be afraid to tell the "mess makers" off, and if the Commander in Chief of our great country called on them, they would be there 100 per cent to cooperate, the war would be over a darn sight quicker. There would be no public fights over "How to catch ducks in Iran," or the use of a former ballet dancer for a particular job. If the former dancer is capable and his ability has been proven, let him have the job. We are fighting a war against the Axis, not each other.

Up To Them

It seems to me that every time I tune in on my radio I am forever hearing remarks about what to do with Germany after the war. What to do with Italy after the war. What to do with Japan after the war. Such expressions get under my skin.

What will be done with Germany is for the Germans to decide!

What will be done with Italy is for the Italians to decide!

What will be done with Japan is for the Japanese (not Japs) to decide!

And what will be done with any other country is for that country to decide and not some outside aggressive persons or country!

Where men get that idea of submerging another people and thrusting upon them their ideas and their ways of living for their own selfish good is beyond me!

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Can't You Hear It?

There's a rattle now apparent—
There's a rumble all around;
In a dozen stricken countries
You can hear the welcome sound;
It comes in from all directions
With a rising tide of hoots—
It's the music of the Quislings
Shaking in their greasy boots.

II.

You can hear it in the morning
And it's louder far by night,
As the once red cocky faces
Turn a sickly gray and white;
Free men everywhere discern it
As across far lands it sweeps
It's the shaking of the Quislings
As they get the well-known "creeps."

III.

Hark as teeth begin to chatter!
Hark as knees begin to hit!
It's a noise that's getting global—
There's a welcome tone to it;
What a hubbub, what a clatter,
And how perfectly they blend!
It's those quakings of the Quislings
As their hair now stands on end!

IV.

Is that thunder in the offing?
Is it static that I hear?
It's increasing by the minute
And becoming extra clear;
It's a noise we've been awaiting—
And it makes the swellest news—
Those vibrations of the Quislings
Now all shaking in their shoes.

V.

Like loose fenders on a taxi—
Like a loosened window blind—
Like the roar from bowling alleys—
Like a bumper dragged behind;
You can hear it without effort—
Even deaf folks can discern
This loud rattle of the Quislings
As they shake from stem to stern.

VI.

Like a hailstorm on a tin roof,
Like a rivet-driving spree,
Like a person cracking walnuts
In a quiet library;
What a cheerful little earful!
What sweet music does it make,
As the Quislings get the jitters
And their buddies get "the shakes!"

That Queer Spa Pair

Saratoga, N. Y.

Hi—Those two fellows are still sitting in the grandstand up here waiting for the Saratoga meeting to start.

I overheard one of 'em just remark: "I've seen a lot of delays at the post, but never one as bad as this."

Shall I tell 'em about Belmont or not?

OLD SLEUTH.

Race Meeting

Once he went to Saratoga
For that old arthritis pain,
It was wonderful how racing
Made him feel so well again.

But the Belmont cure is better
Than the baths up at the Spa;
You can boil out any ailment
In a red-hot railroad car!

Irate Residents

Those of us who are unfortunate enough to be forced to reside in the area bound on the south by Pennsylvania ave., on the east by Minnesota ave., on the North by a nameless ravine, and on the west by the Anacostia River, are rapidly becoming neurotics.

Engineers on the railroad which lies between Minnesota ave. and Anacostia River apparently must resort to endless whistle tooting in order to keep themselves awake between 12 o'clock and 5 o'clock in the morning. Interruptions to the sleep of all residents in that area occur almost continuously every night. A freight train gets stuck on the grade in that area, the engineer begins to blow his whistle and continues until a pusher arrives. He then proceeds to sound five long blasts and one short blast to call in his fireman who finally decides to desert a beer parlor in the area. The engineer then blows four long blasts, evidently to get an open block. Just about that time the pop-off valve lets go and all the infants in the neighborhood start screaming. The blockman finally decides to let the train proceed. By that time the flagman has returned to the pub for another glass of suds, so the engineer goes to sleep on the whistle until the flagman returns. The signaling to proceed is again received in the engine cab and the engineer wastes several more pounds of steam with two long blasts notifying the world a train is about to start.

The engine begins to puff with endless blasting. The wheels start spinning, the train finally gets under way to travel 100 yards when the block is closed and the train stops. Silence reigns then for about 15 minutes, the harassed sleepers begin to dose away. Then the procedure starts again. The puffing and spinning starts again. The train disappears, the babies are comforted. The dogs stop howling, and Morpheus reigns. Fifteen minutes of uninterrupted rest is permitted before another train gets stuck on the grade and begins the endless torture.

These experinces are related in order that you will not be surprised in the event some morning you are writing a head line "Irate Residents of Anacostia Area Dump Freight Train in River."

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Beyond Our Power

NO FOREIGN policy can ever work successfully if those who conduct it misjudge their own power. That is the axiom, I venture to suggest, which explains why the President, Mr. Hull, and the State Department have been beset by growing difficulties since the autumn of 1942. It is true that the State Department is inadequately constituted and badly organized to conduct our foreign policy. But the weakness of the State Department, though it has long been known to close observers in Washington, was not made generally evident until a few months ago.

LIPPMANN

It became evident only when a deep, but unappreciated, change in our foreign relations had occurred. When the President and his chief advisers did not appreciate this deep change in our relative position in the world, their policies began to be increasingly unworkable and disappointing. They then made the very human mistake of getting angry at their critics rather than of reexamining their own policies.

THE HONEYMOON period of President Roosevelt's foreign policy lasted from Pearl Harbor in December, 1941, until the autumn of 1942. Four great events happened in the autumn of 1942: Stalingrad, El Alamein, the North African landing, and the crisis of the Solomons and Guadalcanal operation. They were the turning point of the war. They were also the turning point in our own foreign relations.

Until November, 1942, our role was principally to supply munitions and to send reinforcements to our hard pressed Allies. They did the principal fighting. But they depended upon our capacity and willingness to reinforce them. The central instrument of our activity was lend-lease, and our wartime diplomacy was formed in the image of lend-lease—that is to say of a war and of a peace to follow in which in our strength we helped our Allies who then followed our leadership.

It was then that grandiose schemes of world-wide beneficence were talked about. It was then that we began to debate whether we would lend our support to the maintenance of peace. It was then that the President conceived the idea that we, rather than Frenchmen, were the trustees of French democracy. It was then that the little Machiavellis took to meddling about with the formation under their aegis of postwar governments in Europe. They all stemmed from the same general idea—that as the dispensers of lend-lease the world was waiting to hear our pleasure.

BUT IN fact, though lend-lease continues to be an essential, as well as an admirably used, instrument of war, it has ceased to be the controlling factor in our foreign relations. After Stalingrad and the offensive which followed, the Russians were invincible. After El Alamein the British power, which had been so perilously shaken, was restored. After the North African landing we were no longer lending and leasing: we were fighting. After Guadalcanal we knew and all the world knew that in order to defeat Japan without terrible losses and in a tolerably short time, we needed the help of our allies fully as much as they needed our help.

In other words the lend-lease phase of U. S. foreign policy had been temporary and was ending. Insofar as the President and the State Department carried over into the next phase the basic ideas formed in the lend-lease period, they were bound to run into trouble. For they were then misjudging the actual balance of power.

THEY DID misjudge it and they have run into trouble. They made a gross miscalculation of our own permanent influence in Eastern Europe when they intervened last spring to prevent a full settlement in the Anglo-Soviet treaty. Their lend-lease power, to use a short name for it, was still great enough to prevent what they believed, perhaps rightly, would have been a violation of the Atlantic Charter. But their power was not great enough to bring about a better settlement, and therefore the net result of their intervention beyond their power is that there is no settlement. This is surely one of the principal reasons why they have ever since found themselves frustrated in reaching a general agreement among the Allies.

They made a grave miscalculation in regard to France because they imagined, falsely, that since France needed us for its liberation, France would accept our guidance and tutelage. The unseemly feud with Charles de Gaulle is due to the fact that our embassy in Vichy failed to estimate correctly the invincibly French character of the French national resistance, and encouraged the President and Mr. Hull to believe that they could lend-lease French affairs until the French were endowed with the right to lead themselves.

They made the same miscalculation when they proposed a relief organization in which none of the occupied countries was represented on the governing board. This precipitated the extraordinary spectacle of the smaller nations promptly recognizing the French National Committee without waiting to consult the State Department. They have rallied to De Gaulle as a gesture in behalf of their own sovereign disinclination to be dealt with after the war as lend-lease clients.

OUR FOREIGN policy is not, it is sad to say, in a sound and promising condition. It cannot be restored by inducing selected correspondents to put out stories about how the critics do not understand the war. The critics could all be silenced. The fact would remain that our foreign policy is running into trouble because it is animated by a misjudgment of Mr. Roosevelt's power in the world.

He is carrying over unaltered into a new period the ideas which he formed when he was the sole dispenser of the military reserves, whom all the world had to woo. This is bound to lead him into deeper trouble. For the lend-lease relationship has given way to a necessary partnership where there must be a realization that our power, though large, is limited. In that partnership, therefore, we must be prepared to give and take, not merely to proclaim our views and then insist upon them, complaining that we have the noblest intentions but are misunderstood.

WE HAVE, in short, to grow up and to learn to live as men in a world where we can, by taking thought, safeguard our interests but cannot preside single-handed over the human destiny.

WMC Order Attacked

Labor Member Acts

Frank P. Fenton, director of organization of the American Federation of Labor, and one of three alternate labor members of the War Manpower Commission's Management, Labor, Agriculture Policy Committee yesterday advised AFL officials in Buffalo to disregard a WMC order controlling the hiring of all males in the Buffalo area on the ground that the order was "unauthorized, unwarranted, undemocratic, and unworkable."

Fenton said he planned to ask the national management-labor policy committee to review the Buffalo order to make changes that would bring it into conformance with national policy.

All males in the Buffalo area may get jobs only by referral through the United States Employment Service as part of the Buffalo "controlled hiring plan."

Buffalo Plan Praised

Production and manpower officials have praised the operation of the Buffalo plan, and are preparing to place it in effect in other acute labor shortage areas. The Buffalo order was issued by Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, New York State director of the War Manpower Commission.

Fenton said that threats issued by Mrs. Rosenberg to take war contracts away from noncomplying employers were "contrary to the spirit of the program."

He objected primarily, because the labor referrals made under the program were in accordance with a list prepared by a special Buffalo labor priorities committee. Fenton stated that this committee did not have management or labor representation on it, but was made up primarily of procurement agency officials.

He said that organized labor was prepared to go along with such a controlled referral plan provided that it is established and operated with the participation of both management and labor.

Fenton Critical

Fenton expressed the belief that neither management nor labor in Buffalo liked the way the plan was operating.

3 Transit Men Killed in War To Be Honored

Three former Capital Transit Co. employes killed in the war will be honored today by fellow workers veterans of the first World War.

Gold star certificates of the American Legion will be presented to relatives of Ralph Eugene Johnson, Allan T. Rossignol and Earl Ryan by George E. Warden, commander, and F. F. Fluetcher, adjutant of Capital Transit Post 46, of the American Legion. Officers of the Capital Transit Co. will attend.

The three men are the first Capital Transit employes killed in the war out of the nearly 700 in the armed services.

Ralph Johnson, 32, a boatswain's mate, second class, USN was reported killed in action in June. A native of Washington, Johnson attended Jefferson Junior High School and was a trainman for the transit company until he joined the Navy in August of 1942. His wife, Mrs. Ruth Johnson, 332 Seaton pl. ne., an employe of the War Department, will be unable to attend.

Allen T. Rossignol, 31, pilot officer of the Royal Air Force lost his life in an acciden in northern England, June 2. A graduate of McKinley High School, Pilot Rossignol was a bus driver for eight years. Rejected by the United States Air Force because of his age, he joined the Royal Air Force in June, 1941. He was trained at Terrell, Tex., and was sent to England in August, 1942. He was the son of Aaron Rossignol, a stunt flier killed in a flying exhibition at Old Arlington Beach, Va., in 1923. His wife, Mrs. Marie Rossignol 515 Franklin st. ne., will accept the certificate.

Earl Ryan, corporal in the Field Artillery was killed in action in North Africa, May 23. A son of the late Patrolman Thomas Ryan of the Tenth Precinct and a native of Washington, he attended McKinley High School. He enlisted in the Army in August, 1941, and was sent overseas in March, 1942. His foster mother, Mrs. Clara Johnson, 2210 Pennsylvania ave. nw. will attend the ceremonies.

Food Barter in War Camps Keeps Allied Prisoners Happy

By the Associated Press

A new medium of exchange—the "Foodacco"—has been invented by Allied prisoners of war to put swapping on a business basis.

Details of the system, as ingenius in its conception as the postwar "Unitas" and "Bancor" monetary units proposed by international financiers, were disclosed yesterday by the Red Cross in its new prisoners of war bulletin, published for relatives of imprisoned American fighters and civilian internees.

A British prisoner, confined in Stalag Luft III, a German camp for air force officers and noncoms, described it this way:

"We have an exchange system for surplus foods. It's called 'foodacco' and works very well.

"Cigarettes are 40 points per hundred and chocolate 37 points per quarter pound. So those who require chocolate trade in their cigarettes and everyone is happy."

Tip for prisoners' families: Pencils currently are quoted high in foodacco points.

There were rought spots in the system at the start. One prisoner, for instance, complained that "market confidence has been seriously undermined by a shark who dealt in tins of tomatoes which were relabeled 'beef roll.'"

U. S. Employment Totals 54 Million

Employment in the United States reached a record peak of 54,300,000 during July, the Census Bureau reported yesterday. The net increase of 900,000 over June, the bureau said, resulted primarily from the entrance of students into the labor force with the close of the school year.

CHAPTER XII

Moscow Dateline

By Henry C. Cassidy

Nazis Jittery Over Night Fights

Out of Viazma we turned off the Mojhaisk chaussee on the muddy road to Yartsevo, a village which no longer existed as such, but only as a heap of ruins on a tactically important spot which had been recaptured July 27 and was still held as an advanced point by the Red army. Through a forest, we drove up to a divisional headquarters, three miles from the German lines, and 40 miles northeast of Smolensk. As we entered a clump of woods there, we could hear the artillery thumping in the distance.

HENRY C. CASSIDY

It was definitely a joyful sound, that bump of the big guns, not from any sadistic thought that they were killing men, but from the comforting feeling that those guns were killing Germans who might otherwise kill me in Moscow, my wife and daughter, Constance, in Dedham, Mass.; my mother, father, and brother in Westwood, Mass.; my sister in Chicago, Ill. And it was exhilarating to know that those thumping guns were Russian guns, not only holding the enemy, which was an achievement at that time, but turning him back in bewilderment.

And Then Vagueness

From this point on, for an account of the rest of that day the reader must excuse me if I am a bit vague, for this is where the cocktail-party angle of the story is introduced. I remember walking through a troop-populated wood to a dugout, where I was introduced to Lieutenant Colonel Kirilov, commander of the division. I remember walking into a great, magic tent where Sasha, the 14-year-old mascot of the division, did honors at the door, a soldier played an entry march on a piano, and girls were heaping food and drink on long board tables: all that within sound of the big guns on the front.

From there on I remember very little. We sat down, with Colonel Kirilov and Nikolai Suslov, his political commissar (an office which was later to be abolished), at the head of the table, and with the correspondents along the sides, interspersed with junior officers. Erskine Caldwell sat opposite me, beside an enthusiastic captain who was determined to engage in a duel of "do adna," meaning "in one," or "bottoms up," with vodka as the weapon and a visitor as his opponent.

This, it seemed, was a time-honored tradition, and the guest challanged was honor-bound to meet every pass of his challenger. Caldwell skillfully turned his captain's attention to me, and I became the correspondents' champion for the day. Afterward, I was told, I was carried out of the tent, while the captain, standing at the door, saluted his valiant though defeated opponent—and then passed out in his turn. This is possibly an exaggeration in my case, and probably in the case of the captain, but in any case, when I next became clear about the progress of that historic trip to the front, I was lying in a comfortable cot in a schoolhouse, many miles back of the front.

Some More Hearsay

My colleagues informed me that, after that lunch, I slept quietly in my car, while the others went out to see the command post of an artillery battery, the headquarters of an artillery brigade, and a dugout for troops, two miles from the German line. If that was true, I am sure they have written it for posterity.

While others assumed the role of champions for the rest of the trip, I can complete my account of it more clearly.

We drove the next day to another divisional headquarters, this one only two miles from the German lines in the Dukhovschina sector, and were met by Colonel Mikhail Dodonov, commander of this Siberian unit. Again, we were seated promptly to lunch, this time not in a tent, but in an open clearing in the woods. This must seem very mild, going to the front and promptly sitting down to lunch. In fact, it was very mild. It was precisely this mildness that was impressive. So secure was the Russian position that in both cases the colonel in command could spread a meal for us, almost within sight of the enemy.

After lunch, we coaxed Colonel Dodonov, a big, quiet man, into telling us something about his unit.

Considered Wild Men

"Well," he said, "this is a Siberian division. From the stories of prisoners, we gather that we are regarded as wild men. But actually, we are civilized men, not at all wild."

The silent sentries, the girls serving at tables, with white robes over their khaki uniforms and black boots, gave supporting evidence to his testimony.

"To fight the Germans, you've got to know their weak points, and when you know them, you can beat them," said Dodonov. "They're bad at fighting at night, actually frightened at night, especially in the woods, although, strictly between us, they have some success at night, too."

(That "strictly between us," I am sure, no longer applies, now that the war is two years old and Dodonov has become a general.)

"The peculiarity of this division," he continued, "is that we decided to fight the Germans at night. As a result of three night battles, the Germans have retreated 14 kilometers, leaving much of their equipment and many prisoners.

Knows No Retreat

"This division," he said proudly, "knows no retreat. It has moved only forward.

"Now, the Germans are scared as hell of our patrols and night action. They do a lot of shooting, just to make a noise. They fire thousands of rockets, turning night into day, so they can see around them. We're glad to have them make this light for us."

We slept that night in a medical dressing station, a heated tent with straw spread on the floor and iron cots ranged along the walls, while the artillery sang its deep, hoarse lullaby. In the morning, we found a pouring rain had reduced the dirt road to a terrible bog of oozing black mud. We set out, nevertheless, for Yelnia, greatest objective yet taken by the Red army and final objective of our trip, 75 miles from our tent. Through water-filled bomb and shell craters, under drenched pine trees, and across soggy fields, we slogged all the day. We slept that night in a pine forest outside Dorogobuzh and drove on the next day to Yelnia.

First Major Victory

On the battlefield, we traced the first major Russian victory of the war, a victory which ejected the Germans, for the first time on any front, from any considerable amount of territory. A brigade commissar, who had taken part in the action, explained it to us.

Here, the Germans' own tactics of encirclement and extermination had been turned against the Nazis for the first time; tactics which they were to face again in the battles of Moscow and Stalingrad.

The graveyard of Yelnia itself, which the Germans fired before they left, was lined with the skeletons of burned houses, standing like lonely sentinels along the ravaged streets. Around the city the fields were torn by tank treads, slashed by antitank ditches, and strewn with shattered cottages.

The devastation was far greater than anything I had seen after the war in the west. There, after the fall of Paris, I found the battle had passed swiftly and lightly over most places, punching only a few holes in a village here, wrecking a crossroads there. Around Yelnia, all was consumed in a frightful, all-devastating struggle between two giants, fighting savagely to the death.

From Yelnia we turned back through Viazma to Moscow. The first stories were written under the dateline, "With the Red Army." And two weeks later, after a political intermission for the three-power supply conference, the greatest battle of the year, the Battle of Moscow, began along that same front.

New Subsidy War Planned

Action In Congress

Legislation to block any Administration move to fix farm support guarantees above ceiling price levels was threatened yesterday by congressional opponents of food subsidies.

In one informed quarter it was said the antisubsidy legislation will be offered either as an amendment to the WFA'S proposed program for lifting support prices, or as a rider on any further extension of the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Spokesmen for the American Farm Bureau Federation, most influential congressional farm lobby, meanwhile indicated they would back proposed lifting of Government support prices for maximum production, only if ceiling prices were kept the same or fixed higher than support levels.

If Government supports are put higher than OPA ceilings, they pointed out, the practical effect would be a subsidy, and they will continue to oppose subsidies.

WFA officials recently indicated support levels of some farm commodities may be increased in the effort to step up farm production, and that a billion dollar appropriation may be asked of Congress for that purpose.

Where this brought price supports above ceiling levels it would be necessary for the Government to buy up some crops and resell at a loss.

While the food program had not finally jelled, and no plan has received the definite approval of the President, indications pointed to Administration efforts to stabilize prices around present ceiling levels, without pressing for further price rollbacks.

War Food Administrator Marvin Jones meantime raised 1944 food sights by calling on farmers to plant 13,851,000 more acres of wheat than were seeded this year. The 1944 national wheat goal is 68 million acres, 26 per cent higher than this year's plantings.

The Gallup Poll

Social Security's Expansion Favored By Large Vote on 8th Anniversary

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Aug. 13.—Eight years ago tomorrow—August 14, 1935—President Roosevelt signed a bill which was destined to become one of the most popular and best-liked single pieces of legislation in the history of the New Deal.

On this eighth anniversary of the Social Security Act there are a number of basic amendments pending in Congress which would greatly broaden the scope of the Social Security program. The public, which approved the original act by the overwhelming vote of 89 per cent, is in favor of many of the proposed amendments and a substantial number of Americans are willing to pay 6 per cent on their wages and salaries in order to make the enlarged program possible. Under the existing law employes pay only 1 per cent this year, and 2 per cent next year.

The increase to 6 per cent in payroll deductions, as proposed in the Wagner-Murray-Dingell Bill now before Congress, would go largely toward increasing present pension benefits and toward establishing a new feature of Social Security—payment of benefits for sickness, disability, doctor and hospital bills.

There have been heated arguments in the medical profession over the advisability of setting up "socialized medicine" programs such as this.

While a division of sentiment also exists on the part of the public, nevertheless the majority of voters favor the proposed change.

An Institute survey from coast to coast put the issue before the people as follows:

"At present the Social Security program provides benefits for old age, death and unemployment. Would you favor changing the program to include payment of benefits for sickness, disability, doctor and hospital bills?

The vote is:

Yes	59%
No	29
Undecided	12

All those who favor the program were then confronted with the fact that this would mean an increase in the amount of money deducted from their wages or salaries. They were asked whether they would be willing to accept this larger deduction:

"Would you be willing to pay (or have your husband pay) 6 per cent of your salary or wages in order to make this program possible?"

The vote of the 59 per cent approving the program divides as follows:

Yes	44%
No	11
Undecided	4

Another of the many proposals contained in the bill now before Congress is that social security be broadened to include farmers, domestic servants, Government employes, professional persons and others who are not now included under the program.

By a large vote the public favors expanding Social Security to include these groups:

"At present farmers, domestic servants, Government employes, and professional persons are not included under Social Security. Do you think the Social Security program should be changed to include these groups?"

Yes	64%
No	19
Undecided	17

Costing Lives to Take Sicily, Returned Major Emphasizes

At home, at 2001 Randolph st. ne., again after seven months in North Africa, Maj. Joseph D. Malloy, 42, says the officers and enlisted men on the Sicilian Front are doing as much guessing about the "where" and "when" of a continental invasion as the folks at home.

The major believes newspapers have been too optimistic about the "ease" with which the Allies are seizing Sicily.

"There is still some hard fighting in the area and soldiers are still getting killed," he said.

As quartermaster, Major Malloy supervised the servicing of fighter groups that bombed Sicily, Italy and enemy bases in North Africa.

He weathered several German bombings and strafing raids on American bases.

Diving into a fox hole during a strafing one dark night he suffered a bruised side. Following a kidney operations (probably not connected with the bruise, he said), Major Malloy returned to the States by boat in July. He has been convalescing at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., since.

Major Malloy was an attorney and in the Army Reserves before he began active duty as a first lieutenant in 1941. His first assignment was with the Army Services of Supply in England.

With a laugh he recalled yesterday receiving an invitation to a monthly meeting of the Arlington County Bar Association when stationed in North Africa.

The major marveled at Arab children, who learned the American version of English almost overnight and many as young as 12 are serving as interpreters between soldiers and older Arabs.

Four Airmen From D. C. Area Win Decorations in England

Four men from the Washington area, who are members of the Eighth Bomber Command of the Army Air Forces in England, have been given awards, the War Department announced yesterday.

Second Lieut. Robert E. Goodwin, 27, of 700 Quackenbos st. nw., and Tech. Sergt. Howard W. Payne, 23, of 10111 Greenoch rd., Silver Spring, Md., received the Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster to the Air Medal for the destruction of one enemy aircraft.

Staff Sergt. Adolph J. Lurig, 28, 825 Marietta pl. nw., and Second Lieut. Charles J. Williams, 28, of 3179 North Key blvd., Arlington, Va. both were awarded the Air Medal for making five combat bomber missions.

Native of Tennessee

Originally from Tennessee, Lieutenant Goodwin is a graduate of the Dobyns Bennett High School, Kingsport, Tenn., and attended the University of Cincinnati for two years. He was employed by Herby's Motor Co., Alexandria, Va., prior to his enlistment in January, 1942. He received his wings Christmas Day of 1942 and was sent overseas last spring. His mother, Mrs. Ruth Burnside, and two sisters live in Washington.

A native of Warrenton, Va., Technical Sergeant Payne was graduated from Warrenton High School. Prior to his induction in January, 1942, he was employed as a service station attendant in Warrenton, Va. His wife, Mrs. Juanita Payne, and 11-month-old son, Howard W. Payne, Jr., reside with his brother and sister-in-law at the above address.

Staff Sergeant Lurig, native Washingtonian, worked on the Pentagon Building as an ironworker prior to his induction in September, 1942. He is a graduate of McKinley (Tech) High School. He was credited with shooting down a German fighter in an attack on northwest Germany June 25 of this year. His mother, Mrs. Annie Lurig, lives at the same address.

Born in Wisconsin

Born in Oconomowock, Wis., Lieutenant Williams came to Washington about seven years ago. Prior to his enlistment in January, 1942, he worked for the War Department. He received his wings at Victorville, Calif., in October, 1942, and was sent overseas in April of this year. His mother, Mrs. Belle Williams, lives in Oconomowock, Wis.

Other Maryland men to be given awards were First Lieut. Frank H. Thompson, Annapolis, who received the Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster to the Air Medal, and Tech. Sergt. Norman Glass, Baltimore, who received the Air Medal.

Virginia men who received the Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster to the Air Medal were Second Lieut. Kermit B. Cavedo of Richmond and Second Lieut. Elbert E. Stone of Martinsville. The following Virginia men received the air medal: First Lieut. George A. Hase, Richmond; First Lieut. Thomas A. Hodges, Portsmouth; Tech Sergt. Willard F. Dovel, Harrisonburg and Staff Sergt. Philip E. Lafoe, St. Johnsburg.

Committee Hears Many Station Owners Fear FCC

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 13.—Robert K. Richards, executive assistant for broadcasting in the office of censorship, testified before a congressional subcommittee investigating the Federal Communications Commission today that "a great many radio station owners live in fear of the FCC."

He told the subcommittee of the Cox investigating committee that many station owners "hesitate to challenge the FCC, even when they know the FCC is exceeding its authority."

Richards gave his testimony in response to questions by Eugene L. Garey, committee counsel.

McNutt Urges Broadening of Social Security

By the Associated Press

Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt called for a broadening of the social insurance program yesterday in a statement recalling that today would mark the eighth anniversary of the Social Security Act.

"On the basis of eight years' experience," he said, "we should now prepare for postwar readjustments as well as for the permanent economic security of all the American people."

McNutt expressed conviction that workers, in order to get the greater benefits he said would flow from an expanded program, such as proposed by the Social Security Board, would be willing to pay 5 or 6 per cent of their wages to finance the program, as compared with present 1 per cent deducted from their pay checks.

McNutt summarized the changes recommended by the Security Board as:

"Establishment of a single unified national contributory social insurance system to provide insurance protection for all wage and salary earners and their families against the hazards of unemployment, temporary and permanent disability, costs of hospital care, old age, and death of the breadwinner. Self-employed persons would be included under all the provisions of this system except those relating to temporary disability and unemployment."

Reviewing operations of the present program, McNutt said:

"More than 60 million workers in industry and commerce have earned wage credits which count toward payments under the Federal old-age and survivors insurance program. Total payments amounted to 359 million dollars from 1937 to June 30 of this year, although only small lump sum benefits were payable prior to 1940."

He also reported that though unemployment insurance payments to tide workers over periods of temporary joblessness have "radically declined since the peak month of June, 1940, when more than 1,200,000 workers drew unemployment benefits totaling over $53,600,000," a weekly average of 100,256 workers drew payments totaling nearly six million dollars in June of this year.

Navy Chaplain In Pacific Has Diverse Duties

(The following story was written by First Lieut. Earl J. Wilson, 2816 Connecticut ave. nw., former Post reporter, now Marine Corps combat correspondent.)

Somewhere in the South Pacific (Delayed).—I stopped in to see the chaplain today and found there is more to his job than acting as spiritual adviser.

I found that the quiet-eyed young "sky-pilot" on this barren little island, besides being the spiritual leader to a large number of marines, seabees and bluejackets, must also be a librarian, newspaper editor, nurse's aide, social service worker, attorney and half-a-dozen other functionaries rolled into one.

But it was not so much these activities that prompted me to inquire. Chaplains are often called Padre by marines. "Padre," I said, "tell me, what do you regard as your real job here on this island?"

Peril of Monotony

And this is what he said:

"Life out here, waiting, watching, training, month after month, gets pretty monotonous. Men's normal lives have been interrupted. My job is to try to keep them from cynicism—to give them something they will have as a basis to build on when they go back to civilian life."

I spent most of the day with the chaplain—Lieut. (j. g.) Oliver C. Weaver, USNR, 1400 North 31st st., Birmingham, Ala., who in civilian life was pastor of the Mount Sterling Methodist Church, Mount Sterling, Ill.

First there were a few odds and ends to clean up for the next edition of The Moaning News of which he is the editor. The word "moaning" in the title is derived from the moaning birds that inhabit the island.

Variety of Problems

While doing this he was interrupted by a marine who wanted some phonograph needles, a bluejacket, who wanted a special book which the chaplain found for him, another leatherneck with a poem for the paper, a man who had learned his sweetheart was going with someone else—and so it went until we went to the little hospital.

There he made his rounds of the sick and left a stack of magazines. I left him talking with a patient who wanted to find out about some insurance. Later that evening I saw him again in an earnest discussion with the executive officer about the good in man. Discussions like that seem to gravitate to chaplains and almost invariably they are started by the other person.

Lieutenant Weaver is a graduate of Birmingham Southern College and received his B. D. from Garrett Theological Seminary, Evanston, Ill., in 1939. He entered the service in June, 1942, and has been on this island for the last six months. He has a two-months-old son whom he has never seen.

'Bishops' Grieve

Norwegians Cold to Nazi Church Lure

By Robert Tate Allan
The Post Church Editor

The handful of Nazi pastors and "bishops" in Norway are learning that it's impossible to win followers from among the Norwegian people.

According to a report received by the Norwegian Embassy these men recently sent a plaintive letter to Vidkun Quisling urging that some drastic action be taken to get Nasjonal Samling members to atend church services. "Most of us preach, Sunday after Sunday, to very few listeners, maybe only to a couple or even none at all," the letter stated. This lack of support, it added, has caused such "severe anguish" that some pastors have considered quitting.

Service Attendance Off

Patriotic Norwegians have consistently refrained from attending services conducted by Nazi pastors. The few who do attend are members of Nasjonal Samling, the Norwegian Nazi party, which represents less than 1 per cent of the country's population. On the other hand services conducted by the loyal Lutheran pastors—the vast majority of Norway's clergy—are crowded.

All loyal pastors who have not been imprisoned or exiled continue to serve their people as best they can even though the Nazi authoritis, who have lost no opportunity to oppress the church for its constant opposition to naziism, refuse to acknowledge them as accredited clergymen.

A few days later the Nazi department of church and education replied with a suggestion that pastors devote their time and energy to church work, and added, significantly, that it was "not necessary to discuss today's political struggle in the sermons." In other words, the NS pastors were told to make their sermons less objectionable to patriotic Norwegians.

Bishop Leaves for Good

But these suggestions have not proved to be very helpful. Churches of Nazi pastors remain empty. The Nazi "bishop" of Bergen diocese, G. Falck-Hansen, left the city on an extended leave-of-absence with no intention of returning. As his successor the authorities appointed the Nazi pastor Blessing Dahle, who is said to have been the chief instigator of the letter to Quisling.

Nor has the department's advice been of any help to the Nazi pastor H. J. Simonsen who has asked to be relieved of his "call." After being released from a psychiatric clinic last winter Simonsen was persuaded by the Nazi bishop of Oslo, Lars Froyland, to become pastor of Raade congregation. There he was shunned by everyone. Apparently he also experienced a complete change of heart because in his letter of resignation he wrote: "The church policy being conducted by the present (Nazi) leadership of the Church can hardly be harmonized with Christ's teachings and example. Christ never resorted to violence nor approved of violence to hinder the evil or promote the good. A more personal reason for my resignation is that Nasjonal Samling members, at least in Raade, have been sabotaging the worship services."

Southern Baptist Debt to Be Erased

The Baptist Brotherhood announced this week that plans have been made to erase the entire debt of the Southern Baptist Convention by the end of this year, the Associated Press reported from Ridgecrest, N. C.

According to Dr. Lawson H. Cooke, general secretary, the indebtedness is between $100,000 and $150,000, as compared with six million dollars a decade ago.

Sylvan Theater Will Be Scene Of Hymn 'Sing'

Many local and nearby youth groups are planning to attend the second monthly hymn "sing" tomorrow at 8 p. m. at the Sylvan Theater, Washington Monument Grounds, under the auspices of the Federation of Churches' Defense Commission, with the cooperation of The Washington Post's religious news department.

The first "sing" last month drew more than 1000 persons, and the attendance at tomorrow's program is expected to double that figure, according to Donald F. Bautz, federation defense commissioner.

Corpl. Carlton Harrison of Fort Belvoir again will be cornet soloist. Hugo Eskildson of Augustana Lutheran Church, president of the Washington Federation of Christian Youth, will be among the leaders of the program.

A number of youth groups will go to the "sing" after their regular Sunday evening programs. War workers, servicemen and servicewomen and young people are especially invited.

'Soul' Is Theme In Christian Science Churches

The Christian Science lesson-sermon for tomorrow is "Soul." Services are held in all churches and societies at 11 a. m. and repeated at 8 p. m., except Third Church, at 5 p. m. The public is invited to attend the services and the Wednesday evening meeting at 8 o'clock.

Among the citations comprising the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." (Matthew 11:28.)

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, "It is our ignorance of God, the divine Principle, which produces apparent discord, and the right understanding of Him restores harmony." (Page 390.)

Boothby-Mansell Meeting on Mall

Two outdoor meetings will be conducted tomorrow by the Boothby-Mansell evangelistic party. The afternoon service will be held on the Mall, 9th st. and Constitution ave. nw., at 2:30 p. m. when Evangelist Robert Boothby speaks on the subject, "The Way to Peace and the End of the War." A brass quartet will play sacred music and Leslie Mansell will direct a community sing.

The evening service will be held in the Canvas Tabernacle, Minnesota ave. at 28th st. se., at 8 p. m. Mr. Boothby will again speak and his topic will be "Washington in the Judgment Before God." Services are held every night in the Canvas Tabernacle, except Saturday night.

The U. S. Goes to Church

More than half the population of the United States belongs to some church, says the 1941-42 survey in the Yearbook of American Churches. The more than 67 million church members form the largest total and greatest percentage of U. S. population ever reported. These belonged to 256 religious bodies; 55 millions were over 13 years old. The 11 largest denominational groups charted here had 62 million of the 67 million members

Crowley to Mark Air Milestone

Evangelist Dale Crowley will mark his 1000th local broadcast next week with a series of special messages over WWDC.

In addition to his daily devotional program at 6:45 a. m., he will be heard at 12:35 p. m. Monday through Friday. Another broadcast will be be heard over WFMD, Frederick, at the noon hour. Crowley's "Begin the Day With God" feature now is in its third year.

CROWLEY

The 124th session of his popular radio Bible Quiz will be broadcast tonight at 7 o'clock over WWDC. Participating in the contest for the highest score in Bible knowledge will be selected teams of Bible students from Memorial United Brethren Church and Second Baptist Church.

Representing the Brethren Church will be Mrs. Edwin Martin, Leonard Bean and Miss Mary Arthur. The opposing team of Baptists will be composed of W. C. Brann, Edward S. Wranek and J. D. Nolph.

Evangelist Crowley will preach at Grace Baptist Church, 9th st. and North Carolina ave. se., tomorrow at 11 a. m. and at 8 p. m. His morning subject will be, "God Has the Answer." The evening topic will be, "A God of Judgment."

Metropolitan Baptist

The deacons of Metropolitan Baptist Church will meet there Wednesday at 7:15 p. m. Those considering joining the congregation are asked to attend the meeting.

European Traveler To Speak Tomorrow

John Verhoeven, formerly of Holland, who has traveled extensively in Europe, Canada and the United States as a Baha'i teacher, will speak tomorrow at 8:15 p. m. at the Baha'i Hall, 1308 I st. nw., on "The Art of Giving and Receiving."

Bishop Hughes Extols Wesley At Conference

The role of John Wesley as an "interdenominational saint" was stressed yesterday by Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, Washington resident bishop, in addressing Methodist Day services at the Massanetta Springs (Va.) annual Bible Conference.

He declared that there was always a tendency to overstate the interchurch rivalries of the past, but that, whatever these had been, now the groups of Protestant preachers in any community were likely to be the most fraternal and friendly circle among all the people.

"We all revere Martin Luther, John Calvin, John Robinson, John Knox, Roger Williams, Jonathan Edwards, John Wesley," stated the bishop.

He continued: "No one of us would care to belong to a church that claimed a monopoly on the 'road to Heaven.' This would mean that the largest single Protestant denomination in America would declare that approximately 1 in 18 of our population was bound for the gates of pearl, and that the other 17 were shut out of the covenanted mercies of God! Such a terrible faith could give its holder unspeakable torment.

"John Wesley gave no countenance to such a belief. He laid no stress on the fact that, from the family standpoint, he was an aristocrat, being a cousin of the Duke of Wellington. A high-minded gentleman, speckless and simple in dress, able to speak in several languages and to read in seven of them—he still was an exemplar of spiritual democracy.

"He started a movement that perhaps as much as any other that could be cited became the lengthened shadow of one man," stated Bishop Hughes. "The Wesleyan crusade traces back to him its gift for organization, its passion for education, its zeal for the religious training of childhood, its passion for evangalism, its emphasis upon social righteousness.

"In one respect John Wesley was not typical. The term 'shouting Methodist' did not apply to him. His crusade sometimes became stormy, but he himself was always calm. The joy of the Lord among his people became on a lower range of joy among the people themselves. Puritan behavior did not rout social gladness."

At Westminster

Bible Class Conference Scheduled

More than 300 delegates have enrolled for the twenty-second annual District of Columbia Organized Bible Class Conference, set for September 4, 5 and 6 at Western Maryland College, Westminster.

ETCHISON

With the possibility of more gasoline, many other enrollments are expected, according to Dr. Page McK. Etchison, association president.

Dr. Allen E. Claxton, pastor of New York City's Broadway Temple Methodist Church, will be the conference speaker, emphasizing "Building Spiritual Morale." Delegates from scores of local and nearby churches are expected to attend.

Arlington Man Called to Sitka

The Rev. Dana H. Johnson, who since last January has been pastor of Resurrection Lutheran Church, Arlington, Va., has been called to Sitka, Alaska, to serve under the Board of American Missions.

Lieut. R. T. Schilling, now on leave from his pastoral work in Pennsylvania to serve as morale officer at Fort Myer, will be acting pastor of the Resurrection congregation until designation of a permanent pastor.

Sermon subjects for tomorrow at 11 a. m. will be "Good News for Bad Times." The Sunday school will meet at 9:45 a. m.

Men's Class to Meet

The men's class of the St. Paul Methodist Church will meet Wednesday at 8 p. m. in the church.

Union Services To Be Held At All Souls'

The union services in which All Souls' Unitarian, Mount Pleasant Congregational and the Universalist National Memorial Churches are cooperating during the summer months will be transferred tomorrow to All Souls' Church, 16th and Harvard sts.

The Rev. Waitstill H. Sharp, minister of the Unitarian Church, Wellesley Hills, Mass., will preach. Mr. Sharp, together with his wife, represented American Unitarians in their relief work in Czechoslovakia at the outbreak of the war.

The series of recreation programs, particularly for 'teen-age young people, sponsored by the churches of the Columbia Heights area, are continuing. The Saturday night programs on the Longfellow Terrace, All Souls' Church, include motion pictures, with "The Last of the Mohicans" on August 14 and "Imitation of Life" August 21.

Young People Sponsor Lutheran Missions

The Young People's League of Reformation Lutheran Church will sponsor a world missions program tomorrow at 7 p. m., with Mrs. Rudolph Bischoff in charge. The program will stress the Luther League project of the Luthergirl Seminary in Ragahmundry, India.

Hamline Youth Service

The Youth Fellowship of Hamline Methodist Church will hold its service tomorrow evening in Rock Creek Park, assembling at the church at 6:45 p. m.

Accent on Youth

Eight Churches Cooperate in Youth Project

The eight cooperating churches of the Columbia Heights area are still carrying on their teen-age program of recreation six nights a week, from 8 to 10 p. m. The program now is in its fourth week and is reaching 175 to 200 teenagers weekly.

Informal games of all kinds, competitive and group, are featured by the First Evangelical and Reformed Church, Central Presbyterian Church, Columbia Heights Christian Church and National Baptist Memorial Church, while the Church of the Latter Day Saints specializes in games out of doors and ballroom and folk dancing, and the Unitarian All Souls Church in a feature movie on the garden each Saturday evening. The Mount Pleasant Congregational Church and the Calvary Methodist Church are furnishing leadership and cooperating in the programs.

Leaders in the cooperating churches feel it is a worth while project, and parents have expressed their appreciation of the effort. It is planned to continue the present programs until school begins in September. The leaders also are looking ahead to the fall and winter months and are making plans to fit a church recreational program for teen-agers of the community into the school program and other community-wide activities, perhaps emphasizing an after-school hours program each day.

The weekly schedule follows:

Mondays, Columbia Heights Christian Church, 1435 Park rd. nw.; Tuesdays, First Evangelical and Reformed Church, 13th and Monroe sts., nw.; Wednesdays, Central Presbyterian Church, 15th and Irving sts., nw.; Thursdays, Latter-Day Saints' Church, 16th st. and Columbia Rd. nw.; Fridays, National Baptist Memorial Church, 16th st. and Columbia rd. nw., and Saturdays, All Souls' Unitarian Church, 16th and Harvard sts. nw.

Debut Planned By Girls' Band Tomorrow

An extracurricular wartime job of supplying music for the service boys has been taken on by 16 War Department girls, whose sweet-and-swing band will make their debut tomorrow before the wounded soldiers at Walter Reed Hospital.

They're known as the War Department All-Girl Orchestra, but a male is their leader—Charles Mayer, head of a statistics section at the War Department, who in past years has organized other all-feminine bands.

Mayer is quite proud of his present contingent. "They're far better than I ever expected," he said yesterday. "They really sound fine."

Sponsored by the Provost Marshal General Allen W. Gullion, the girls will entertain strictly for the war effort. Their playing grounds will be Army camps or hospitals, the Stage Door Canteen and war-bond rallies.

The ladies of the orchestra, who play in the traditional Government girl garb of blouse and skirt, are: Saxes, Ruth Bailey, Lucrete Williams, Alice Hinton; trumpets, Anita Moore, Barbara Claggett, Marge Chapek; trombones, Ruth Harry, Jo Bowman; drummer, Gloria Hershfield; bass, Fairy Ann Hammond; pianist, Florence Jason; violins, Tony Amizich, Jerry Steinhauer, Margaret Rielag, Irene Levy; vocalist, Helen Hammon.

Suburban Steeple

Suburban Clerics Become Chaplains

Lieuts. (j. g.) George B. Tittman, former rector of St. Mary's Episcopal Church, Arlington, Va., and Raymond Philip Black, former rector of Prince Georges Parish, Rockville, Md., were among the graduates of the Navy Chaplains' School at Williamsburg, Va., August 1, the Navy Chief of Chaplains' Office announced this week.

All newly commissioned chaplains receive a two-month training course at the school before going to their first assignment.

Chaplain Tittman, who has been assigned to service afloat, was graduated from Harvard University in 1936, and from Virginia Theological Seminary, Alexandria, in 1939.

Chaplain Black, whose assignment will be at the Philadelphia Naval Hospital, was graduated from Lehigh University in 1929 and from General Theological Seminary, New York City, in 1932.

Church Mortgage Burned

Burning of the mortgage on the church property and an address by Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes featured recent dedicatory exercises at Mount Carmel Methodist Church at Sunshine, Montgomery County. The original mortgage of $8000 was gradually reduced and the last $2350 was paid during the year which ended May 31, it was explained by the pastor, the Rev. Conrad W. Jordan. Among participants were the Rev. John R. Edwards, D. D., superintendent of the Washington West District of the Methodist Church, and the Rev. H. C. Burkins, former pastor of Mount Carmel Church. The combined choirs of Mount Carmel and Brookville Methodist Churches furnished the music.

HENRY F. LYTE
Abide with me! fast falls the eventide.
The darkness deepens: Lord, with me abide!
When other helpers fail, and comforts flee,
Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS
Henry F Lyte was a clergyman with remarkable literary gifts. Poor health compelled him to give up his pastorate. He preached his farewell sermon, and, discouraged, went down to his beloved ocean and prayed for inspiration to write something that would live. As evening was closing, he wrote this immortal hymn.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Detroit, Aug. 12.—The cheers are ringing out for Rudy York again at Briggs Stadium, reminiscent of August, 1937, when the big first baseman clouted 18 home runs during that month to set a new major league record. Rudy's riding a new crest of popularity in Detroit.

POVICH

But if there is diffidence in York's manner as he doffs his cap in response to the customers' applause after each homer, and it is not a completely whole-hearted gesture, that is understandable. Only a month ago they were booing York so vociferously in Detroit that the baseball writers begged the fans to give him a fair break.

New York can understand what a whale of a difference a few homers make. He is hitting homers now—six in the past eight days—and the customers are tumbling over themselves in adulation. But York isn't being taken in. At leat not to the point where he believes the customers are now his firm friends. Long ago he discovered the fickleness of the genus fan.

And so when Rudy hits one these days, and the fans cheer, they get no happy grin from the big Indian as he crosses the plate with the conventional cap-tipping gesture. He isn't cool, just barely polite, knowing that when he stops hiting homers they'll boo him again, just as loudly as they are applauding him now.

York saw Hank Greenberg go through the same phases of his home run hitting career in Detroit, although it could have happened in any other town because baseball fans are that way. When Greenberg blossomed as a home run hitter the Briggs Field customers lavished their praises on him. When he slumped, he was booed. Greenberg couldn't take it quite as phlegmatically as York.

There was the day a few years ago when Greenberg struck out with the bases full in his first time at bat. He got it from the stands, but loud. Again he struck out, and the boos increased, but when he hit a late inning homer, and the cheers came, Greenberg didn't appreciate them. Crossing the plate, he halted and made a sweeping bow that was eloquently sarcastic.

That was a cluck trick by Greenberg, and older players could have told him that riling the customers is always stupid; that a ball player can't react as he likes. Yet later that same day when Hank hit a second homer to win the game, the fans cheered the guy all over again, proving that you can't boo a home run.

York, incidentally, has come a long way since they used to call him the totem pole first baseman, a snide allusion to his inability to cover ground around first base. That was several years ago. For the past few seasons he has been one of the better defensive first basemen in the league, living down what had been a reputation as a tanglefoot first sacker.

York still is no gazelle around the bag; he makes the pitcher take more throws to first base than any other first baseman in the majors, but he gets his man. And he's an immense target for the Detroit infielders, and perhaps the best in the league at grabbing that hard-hit ball over the bag. The Tigers have had no first base worries ever since he took over.

When Ty Cobb first saw York playing for the Tigers he was flabbergasted at Rudy's habit of taking all throws with only his gloved hand. "Don't the fellow ever catch a ball with two hands?" Cobb asked. He couldn't understand it until later in the game when, after York, had grabbed everything thrown near the bag without dropping a ball, Cobb declared: "I guess he's all right. He can catch those balls in his teeth and I wouldn't care as long as he makes the put-out."

Of all the brutal breaks a ball player could get, one is shaping up this week for big Hank Oana, the Tigers' pitcher-outfielder, who waited 13 years to get in the big leagues only to find himself victim of some kind of a clerical error.

The Tigers signed Oana last spring after he had been declared a free agent. At 33, he was in the big leagues after a tour through a dozen minor circuits. With the Tigers he was a success as a pinch hitter and relief pitcher. The other day he learned that he is the property of Milwaukee and was ordered to return to that club.

Seems like there had been some mistake when Oana had been declared a free agent. Milwaukee had bought him from Fort Worth on the assumption he was 3-A in the draft, and with the promise that it would be no deal if Oana were classified 1-A. A draft board official told Mrs. Oana the player had been reclassified 1-A, and Milwaukee called off the deal.

But when the Texas League suspended operations because of the war, Oana was declared a free agent. He sold himself to the Tigers. Now it develops that he has never been official 3-A and Milwaukee wants him back. Judge Landis said he must return and Oana, who has made good in the majors, can't stick unless Milwaukee accepts another pitcher from the Tigers who are already short-handed.

Some of the Threats Redskins Face in All-Star Game

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS

While the 'Skins are laboring at San Diego, the All-Star squad also is making hay while the sun shines down on Northwestern's Dyche Stadium at Evanston, Ill. Paul Governali, left, quarterback of Columbia, goes into the air for a pass; Charles Trippi, center, Georgia halfback and star of the last Rose Bowl game, starts a run; Roy McKay, right, Texas fullback, gets off a punt. The three are probable starters against the Washington pro team at Chicago, August 25.

York Homer String Halted By Candini

Tigers Swamped By Early Attack; Overmire Chased In First Frame

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

Detroit, Aug. 13.—The Nats acted just like a good ball team this afternoon, and won a ball game. They reared up and slapped down the Tigers with eight runs in the first two innings and then coasted to an 11-3 victory with no trouble at all.

Behind that 8-0 lead, it was a soft touch for Milo Candini, who stopped Rudy York's home-run hitting spree and pitched one-hit ball until the sixth inning. He ended up with a six-hit game, and the Nats ended up with third place in the league standings.

Manager Ossie Bluege, irked by two straight defeats here, told his athletes off in a pregame dressing room speech and then sent a reshuffled line-up onto the field, featuring the absence of Stan Spence. He benched Spence and Jake Early and started the game with eight right-handed hitters.

Overmire Chased Early

Frank Overmire, a left-hander who had beaten the Nats in Washington earlier in the month, was dispatched today before he could get anybody out in the first inning. Hank Oana halted the damage at three runs in the opening inning, but he got his in the second. Five more runs for the Nats.

They were a rip-snorting outfit all afternoon. They banged four Detroit pitchers for 11 hits, including a triple and three two-baggers. They pulled a double steal and, in fact, stole three bases in the first inning. Tony Giuliani rapped out three straight hits.

George Case, hitless in the previous two games, commenced things by hitting Overmire's second pitch for a single to center. Mickey Vernon singled to left and Powell drew a walk to fill the bases. Whereupon Bob Johnson delivered the big blow, a solid single to right and Overmire became the first out of the inning.

Big Oana came in with two on and none out, and the Nats got nothing more out of the inning, chiefly because Ellis Clary popped bunted into Higgins' hands for a double play.

Nine Nats went to bat in the first inning and nine Nats went to bat in the second inning, despite only one hit. Oana threatened to walk one batter for each of the 2324 customers in the park.

Nats Weren't Through

The only hit of that second inning was George Case's triple to left center which Dick Wakefield and Doc Cramer played as if it were something to be avoided. Case was the first man up. He scored on Vernon's long fly to center. Then Oana lost his control and his job. He walked the next three men and had two balls and a strike on Clary when Johnny Gorsica moved in to complete the pass and force a run home.

But the Nats weren't through. Sullivan hit a grounder to Hoover, who threw wild to second and Johnson and two more runs scored. Clary, who took third on the error, scooted home while Giuliani was hitting into a force play.

Gorsica was doing all right until the sixth when the Nats went two-base hit crazy. Powell doubled against the wall in left center, Johnson walked, Sullivan doubled off third base and Giuliani doubled to center and the Nats had three more runs.

Until the sixth, Candini had a one-hit game, but Pinchhitter Ned Harris opened the sixth with a triple, and scored on Dick Wakefield's broken back single to right. They picked up another run in the seventh and a third run in the ninth on Clary's wild throw with two out, but it was not very exciting.

Left-hander Hal Newhouser goes to the mound for the Tigers tomorrow in the series final, so Bluege will present the same right-handed hitting lineup . . . Powell, playing center field, did all right in his debut for the Nats . . . He drew two walks, stole a base, hit a two-bagger against the wall, and dragged down two long drives by York and Bloodworth in deepest center . . . Alex Carrasquel, who has somehow amassed a record of 10 wins and 5 defeats, will start for the Nats tomorrow . . . Bluege is saving the more impressive Mickey Haefner for the up-coming series with Cleveland.

Indians Win Sixth in Row, Beat A's, 6 to 4

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Aug. 13.—The Cleveland Indians won their sixth straight game and swept into undisputed possession of second place in the American League standings by defeating Philadelphia today, 6 to 4, for Mel Harder's fifth victory of the season.

Three three-run innings against Pitcher Don Black did the business for the Tribesmen.

Roy Cullenbine opened the fourth frame by drawing a base on balls. Mickey Rocco singled and Manager Lou Boudreau walked to fill the sacks. Black's wild pitch sent Cullenbine across, the other runners advancing. Ray Mack's one-bagger scored Rocco and Boudreau.

In the seventh, Mack singled, Harder sacrificed and Jimmy Grant batted for Russ Peters and walked. Oris Hockett singled to tally Mack. Grant also came in when the ball got away from Johnny Welaj. Cullenbine's single tallied Hockett.

All-Stars Work Out Three Fast Backfield Units

By the Associated Press

Evanston, Ill., Aug. 13.—Three backfield combinations, which Assistant Coach Babe Horrell praises as "the fastest ever assembled on one squad," are working out as complete units for the All-Star football game August 25.

"Of course, those backs may not run very far unless we get a comparable group of linemen," Horrell, UCLA coach, added, "but for speed these boys can outstep any bunch I've ever seen."

Braves Tumble Cubs Into 7th, Winning, 5 to 4

Boston, Aug. 13.—"Butch" Nieman's two-run homer in the tenth inning gave the Boston Braves a 5-4 victory and sixth place in the National League standing today while tumbling their opponents, the Chicago Cubs, into the seventh slot.

It was Boston's third triumph in a row over the Cubs and the second time in as many days that Nieman's potent bat had rattled off the game-winning hit in extra innings. His belt came after Charlie Workman had opened the Boston half of the tenth with a double down the left field line off Claude Passeau, who went the distance although his right wrist was injured in the third by a Nate Andrews line drive.

Chicago, which held a 3-1 lead only to let the Braves tie it up in the eighth, apparently cinched the game in the first half of the tenth. Bill Nicholson singled and came home on pinch-hitter Ival Goodman's double to left center.

Yanks Blank Browns, Despite 9 Hits, 4-0

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 13.—The St. Louis Browns outhit the New York Yankees today, but Spurgeon (Spud) Chandler kept their 9 blows scattered harmlessly for a 4-to-0 shutout and his fifteenth triumph against 3 defeats this season.

The Yankees, who were held to seven safeties, made them count effectively with an extra-base dressing against Johnny Niggeling and Nelson Potter.

In the first inning, Frank Crosetti's single and a double by Bill Johnson put the American League leaders off in front with one run. In the fourth Ken Sears hit his first home run of the season and in the ninth Nick Etten doubled, Sears was intentionally passed and George Stirnweiss smashed a two-bagger against the left centerfield wall for a final pair of runs.

The Browns pestered Chandler in almost every inning, with Chet Laabs getting three hits, but the Kanks' ace righthander remained unruffled, fanned six, and gained his fourth shutout with little difficulty.

George Stainback, reserve outfielder for New York, was banished from the Yankees' bench by Umpire Cal Hubbard in the fifth inning apparently for his comments on a disputed decision in the fourth.

Gerry Priddy, Vernon in Fist Fight

Detroit, Aug. 13.—First Baseman Mickey Vernon and Second Baseman Gerry Priddy swapped punches in the Nats' dressing room today following the club's 11-3 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Vernon, accused by Priddy of failing to cut off a throw from the outfield in the seventh inning, suddenly bounced a right hand off Priddy's jaw and was clipped in return before they were separated by teammates.

Those two punches were the highlights of the battle which quickly resolved itself into a tugging match by other players who laid hands on the battlers.

Vernon later invited Priddy to "step outside" and Priddy accepted the challenge, but teammates again intervened.

The flaring of tempers was the outgrowth, it was said, of repeated attempts by Priddy this season to point out Vernon's failure to intercept throws from the outfield.

Manager Ossie Bluege refused to take the flare-up seriously. "They ended up friends," he said. "Anyway, I like their show of spirit. If they can still argue about a play after a winning ball game, it shows they're interested in it. There won't be any fines. I'm glad to see Vernon show some signs of that kind of spirit."

Luke Appling's 2000th Hit Beats Bosox for Chicago, 3 to 2

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 13.—Luke Appling's 2000th big league hit was something more than just a record book entry today. It was the difference between two-run homers by catcher Tom Turner for the White Sox and first baseman Tony Lupien for the Boston Red Sox, giving the Chicagoans a 3-to-2 decision and putting them ahead, three games to two, in the six-game series.

The veteran White Sox shortstop reached the "two-grand" mark by smashing a single off Lupien's glove in the first inning, scoring Wally Moses who had gained third on a series of plays, including L. Newsome's low throw to first, a fielder's choice and a sacrifice.

Tex Hughson, making his first appearance since the thumb on his pitching hand was injured a couple of weeks ago, went a six-hit route, but Johnny Humphries and Gordon Maltzberger refused to allow his mates to catch up after Joe Kuhel doubled in the second inning and Turner jarred him for the homer.

Appling became the eightieth player in big league history and the ninth contemporary star to achieve 2000 hits. The 34-year-old Georgian started with the White Sox in 1930, only a few months out of Oglethorpe University. Other players still active who have reached the 2000 mark are Billy Herman and Paul Waner, Brooklyn; Mel Ott, Joe Medwick and Dick Bartell, New York Giants; Joe Cronin and Al Simmons, Boston Red Sox, and Chuck Klein, Philadelphia. Waner passed the 3000 mark last year.

Chalky Wright's Maritime Hopes Dashed by Board

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 13.—Former Featherweight Champion Chalky Wright's draft board refused to permit the California Negro to report to the United States Maritime Service today and ordered him to show up for induction in the Army August 28.

Chalky was sworn into the Maritime Service a month ago and directed to check in today. He apparently overlooked notifying his draft board, however, and early this week he received his induction notice. Today he appeared before the board and was told the Maritime Service would have to get along without him.

Southworth Likes Hitting Streaks—But Not for His Cards

By Jusson Bailey

Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Aug. 13.—The world champion St. Louis Cardinals have a monopoly on hitting streaks in the National League this year. Five times one of the Redbirds has taken wing for a flight of more than 20 consecutive games.

But the man you might expect to be happiest about all this continuous clouting, skipper Billy Southworth, says he doesn't like batting streaks—not even good ones.

"I just would rather not have them," he explained today, "because the trouble is they put the batter under a strain and generally are followed by a slump.

"I think it is a question how much good a hitting streak does a ball club. If I could dictate a policy I would want the hitters to hit in three or four games at a clip, miss a game and go one. I think they would get more hits and more timely hits that way.

"When a boy gets in a streak the strain usually gets so heavy that he is relieved to get just one hit in a ball game and you seldom see a hitter in a streak getting two or three blows in a game. Yet when you know a fellow has a string going you will pull for him to extend it even though you realize that it probably will be followed by a slump."

Right now the sizzling streak on the Cardinals is 22 games by Harry (Little Dixie) Walker, who also put together 22 in a row earlier in the season, as did Stan Musial and George (Whitey) Kuraowski. In addition Walker Cooper had a run of 21 games previously.

After Walker's first streak ended in mid-June he went into a spectacular nosedive that dropped his batting average from .345 to .280. According to travelers with the Cardinals, however, Walker's first streak might still be going except for one thing.

On June 1 he accidently hit a home run at Brooklyn, his first and last of the season. He liked the idea of being heralded a slugger so well that he gave up beating out bunts and slashing liners through the infield. He started swinging for the fences. Finally somebody pointed out to him that any resemblance he thought he had to Babe Ruth was just an illusion and Walker started hitting singles again.

When Walker's present streak ends the Cardinals, in spite of Southworth's aversion to them, have another hot one on the fire. Walker Cooper has hit in 15 in a row.

Rodney Stone Wins Sanford Stakes

Favored Ravenala 2d; Free Lance 3d; 12,500, Smallest of Meeting, See Race

By the Associated Press

Belmont Park, N. Y., Aug. 13.—Harry LaMontagne's $5100 yearling buy, Rodney Stone, with the redoubtable Ted Atkinson in the saddle, drove to a length and a half victory in the thirty-first Sanford Stakes before 12,585 fans, smallest crowd of the meeting, here this afternoon.

Highest priced son of Bull Dog sold at the Spa auctions last year, Rodney Stone today won more than his purchase price in this one acre—$5700—and made his total earnings to date $9875 as he flashed over 6 furlongs of the straightaway in 1:11 1-5. The bay colt returned $9.50 for $2.

Joe W. Brown's Ravenala, the favorite, was second by four lengths over Wheatley's sluggish starting Free Lance, with Dustman also closing fast to be fourth.

The Sanford, as most everyone knows, is the race in which Man O'War met with his only defeat, behind Upset in 1919.

Took Early Advantage

It was Rodney Stone's second score in seven starts. And the victory was the second of the day and the twenty-first of the meeting for Jockey Atkinson, who continued to set a dizzy pace for rival riders here.

The winner, which chased the star filly, Cocopet, home in the recent Saratoga Sales Stakes, was hustled into a narrow early advantage. He made Hydrant, another son of Bull Dog, falter early. Ravenala then took up the chase. Atkinson urged Rodney Stone a bit farther away from his opposition all through the last furlong, but had to keep his mount under a drive to make success certain. Ravenala was not menaced by the late rally of Free Lance.

Weak Field Runs Today in The Travers

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 13—The Nation's oldest horse race, the Travers, will be run for the seventy-fourth time tomorrow—and probably never in its history has there been a weaker field for it.

The mile-and-a-quarter grind for 3-year-olds, which dates back to the Civil War, is the headline attraction of the transplanted Saratoga-at-Belmont card, and is supported by another old-timer—the fifty-second running of the Spinaway Stakes for 2-year-old fillies.

Stars Are On Shelf

With Count Fleet, Devil's Thumb, Ocean Wave, Chop Chop and Blue Swords on the shelf nursing assorted aches and pains, the Travers field of seven consists of a collection of gee-gees "named Joe." Favored to pick up the pay check of $19,850—biggest in a decade—is Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane's speedy stretch-strutter, Bourmont, a $4100 yearling buy who has won $15,425 and whose chief claim to fame up to now is that he wound up second in the Arlington Classic.

Except for him, the oat-burners in the race appear to be fugitives from the selling ranks. For instance, Mrs. Barclay Douglas' Eurasian has been beaten six times in Class "B" and "C" affairs since May; Joseph E. Widener's Accord wound up second in a cheap Class "C" sprint in his last outing, and W. E. Boeing's Twoses has won only two simple overnight races in his career.

Boojiana Is Favored

Fourteen "young ladies" are going after the $9650 winner's end of the six furlong Spinaway, with Sonny Whitney's hot-and-cold Boojiana, who took the Schuylerville Stakes last Saturday by four lengths, the glamour girl. Chief opposition figures to come from among William Woodward's Thread O' Gold, second in the Schuylerville; Boojiana's stablemate, Peace Dust, an impressive winner in her last out; and Colonel Ed Bradley's Bee Mac, who waltzed in with a sprint victory a week ago. Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' Red Wonder and Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane's Dare Me are the dark horses.

Full P. G. A. Golf Schedule Of 30 Events Planned

By Sid Feder
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Aug. 13.—Big-time golf has been patched up and given a shot in the arm in the last few weeks—and is opening for business again at the same old stands this fall and winter.

In fact, the sports family's "ailing-pet" war baby is alive and kicking so well once more that Freddy Corcoran, the round-faced Boston Irishman who makes the PGA wheels go round, is mapping out a full schedule of some 30 tournaments from September right through the winter, and is even adding a few new stops to make it a coast-to-coast-and-back-again whirl.

Chief reason for the revival of the hit-and-walk sport has been the discovery that there are enough players still around to make a ball game out of it. At least ten "name" players, fellows like Gene Sarazen and Craig Wood and Byron Nelson and Walter Hagen, have assured Corcoran that they'd be available for the entire swing.

Driving Ban Lifting Expected

What's more, golf, like everything else, is expecting the ban on pleasure driving to be lifted soon, so that the folks who foot the bills—the cash customers—will be able to get out to watch those big fellows striking that little white ball.

"At least part of the proceeds from every tournament and exhibition," Corcoran went on, "will be donated to war relief. So far, professional golf has raised $150,000 for war charities, including close to $35,000 the Red Cross will get from last week's Ryder Cup matches in Detroit."

After the Victory Open at Chicago late this month, the fall swing will get under way September 2-5 with a $7500 16-player invitation match play round robin at Minneapolis for the benefit of the USO. Then Freddie hopes to bring the troupe in for a big tournament in New York. So far, he has tentative tournament and exhibition dates, beginning October 1 in Vancouver, Denver, Omaha, Salt Lake City, Seattle and Spokane.

Will Head South

That will take it through November, after which the shotmakers will remove their red flannels and head South for their usual grapefruit swing through the Carolinas—Pinehurst and Greensboro—down to Miami and west through Texas and California. Corcoran has contacted the sponsors of the 20 regular winter tournaments asking them if they're interested.

Babe Sharkey Matched With Talun at Turner's

Chief Forbids Off-Duty Jobs For Firemen

The recent request of Fred Z. Hetzel, acting area director of the War Manpower Commission, that city firemen be permitted to undertake other jobs when they are off duty, was turned down flat yesterday by Stephen T. Porter, chief engineer of the Fire Department.

Hetzel's request was made August 3 and pointed out the acute shortage of certain types of skilled labor. The request emphasized especially the predicted need for drivers of fuel trucks during the coming winter. Hetzel said he had been informed firemen themselves had requested they be allowed to obtain jobs during their off hours.

Chief's Statement

In his reply to the District Commissioners Chief Porter said:

"The Fire Department is fully aware of the manpower shortage in various branches of industry and, specifically, we now have 69 vacancies of our own.

"Off-duty firemen are subject to call in any emergency and are required to arrange that they be notified promptly whenever they are needed. It would be manifestly impossible for this department to notify an employe that his services are needed to combat a multiple alarm fire if said employe was driving a truck and delivering oil somewhere.

Fireman's Duties

"The duties of a fireman require the exercise of every faculty, physical and mental, for the preservation of life and property, and I do not approve of them dividing their strength, as well as their interest and attention, between their departmental duties and outside pursuits.

"It is recommended that Mr. Hetzel be advised that his request is disapproved."

Porter's letter appeared to clinch the rule against firemen working on other jobs. Several months ago several men were reprimanded by the fire board for working in grocery stores.

Provosts Will Get Arrest Reports On Servicemen

Servicement hereafter arrestd in Washington on charges other than traffic violations, will be reported to the Army and Navy provost authorities, Inspector Harvey Callahan, assistant police superintendent, said today.

In a memorandum to all commanding officers, the police inspector explained that most precincts had been accepting collaterals then turning the men loose without reporting them to proper military boards.

"In no case," he said, "is a precinct to accept collateral from a member of the armed forces arrested for drunkenness or disorderly conduct."

War Sidelights

Japanese Stand By Axis Pact German Statement Declares

The Japanese cabinet met yesterday to consider a report on the European situation by Foreign Minister Mamoru Shigemitsu, who outlined conversations he had Thursday with the German and Italian ambassadors, the Berlin radio reported in a broadcast recorded by the Associated Press.

Another German broadcast quoted a Japanese government spokesman as saying in commenting on the exchange of views between Shigemitsu and the ambassadors that "the foundations of the tripartite pact remain immutable."

Finnish Peace Talk

Stockholm, Aug. 13 (AP).—The Finnish Minister Toivo Kivameki returned to Helsinki from Berlin today, reviving talk of Finnish moves to get out of the war.

Finnish fears of Russia, however, were reflected in the liberal newspaper Helsingin Sanomat, which cautioned that Russia might have the most to say about postwar Europe.

Nobile Returns to Italy

Barcelona, Aug. 13 (AP).—Gen. Umberto Nobile, Arctic explorer and aviation expert, left Barcelona for Rome yesterday. He told friends he was "glad to be back to an Italy where fascism no longer reigns."

Plane Crew Interned

Bern, Switzerland, Aug. 13 (AP).—An official Swiss communique reported tonight an American four-engined plane flew over Swiss territory this afternoon, crossed to Germany and then returned to Switzerland and landed at the Uzwil airdrome near St. Gallen, where the crew set it afire. The communique said the crew was interned.

PCA Applies For Authority To Expand

Pennsylvania - Central Airlines yesterday asked the Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) for authority to extend its operations into four additional States and 22 cities along the upper Atlantic Seaboard.

PCA, already operating in 12 States, proposed to link its main terminal in Washington with New York and Boston and from these centers establish service to a group of cities which PCA President C. Bedell Monro said "have demonstrated a need for more frequent service and connections with other cities in the United States."

The application contemplates service from Washington to Baltimore, already on the company's flight schedule, through Wilmington, Del.; Philadelphia, Trenton and Newark, N. J., to New York.

From New York, the company asked permission, in addition to a direct airline to Boston, to serve on that route Bridgeport, New Haven, New London, Conn.; New Bedford, Fall River, Mass.; Providence, R. I.; Attleboro, Taunton and Brockton, Mass. Another proposed route from New York to Boston would make stops at New Britain, Waterbury, Meriden, Bristol, Hartford, Conn., Springfield and Worcester, Mass.

The company said the plan would provide direct aerial service from Boston to Norfolk, Va.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

Store Sales Decline

Sales in Washington department stores duriing the week ended August 7 declined 6 per cent, as compared with the figure for the corresponding period last year, the Fifth Federal Reserve district review disclosed yesterday. For the entire district sales were off 7 per cent for the period.

For the four weeks ended August 7, 1943, as compared with the corresponding period of 1942, Washington department store sales showed an increase of 4 per cent, while the entire district registered an 8 per cent gain.

These averages are based on reports from 18 leading department stores.

Wins Another Round

The Childs Company won another round in its battle against an involuntary reorganization petition when Federal Bankruptcy Referee Robert P. Stephenson in New York recommended dismissal of the action after ruling that two of the three petitioners were not creditors of the firm. The petition was filed June 18 and hearings started August 6.

Earnings Reports

New York, Aug. 13 (AP).—National Dairy Products Corporation and domestic subsidiaries reported today for six months to June 30 net profit of $6,017,455, equal to 96 per cent a common share, against $5,423,425, or 86 cents a share, in the first half of 1942. In the latest period Federal taxes amounted to 17 million dollars and a reserve of $1,800,000 was set aside. A year ago Federal taxes called for $5,529,500 aud $5,401,500 was set up for contingencies.

Fairchild Aviation Corporation, makers of navigation instruments and other equipment, reported for six months to June 30 net profit of $713,384, equal to $2.12 a share on the capital stock; compared with $579,037, or $1.72 a share, in the first part of 1942.

Gas Production Drops

Daily average production of natural gasoline and allied products in June dropped to 9,873,000 gallons compared with 9,877,000 in May, the Bureau of Mines reported yesterday.

Gains in Illinois, Oklahoma, Louisiana and California were offset by decreases in the Eastern States, East Texas and the panhandle fronties. However, total production for the first six months of 1943 was 5 per cent above the corresponding period of 1942.

Stocks declined to 217,518,000 gallons at the end of June compared with 227,094,000 at the end of May.

Net Equals $1.44 Share

Chicago, Aug. 13 (AP).—Edward G. Seubert, president of the Standard Oil Co. (Indiana), announced today that the consolidated net earnings for the first six months of 1943 were $22,079,418, equal to $1.00 a capital share. Consolidated net earnings for the same period of 1942 amounted to $19,390,526, equal to $1.27 a capital share.

Stern Provides Free Group Insurance

Free group insurance for 1000 employes of Stern Brothers, New York, one of the country's leading department stores, was announced yesterday by President William O. Riordan. The protection comprises group life, accident and sickness, and accidental death and dismemberment insurance. The insurance plan, which became effective on August 1, is the first adopted by an important department store that provides as many group coverages without cost to employes. It is underwritten by the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States.

Trend of the Times

Hot Springs, Va.—Steaks being more desirable these days, the grand prize of the sixteenth annual Bath County Horse Show will be a steer, and not the customary award of a pony.

Count Your Blessings

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 13.—The current drought has been a boon to hay fever sufferers. The dry spell has just about wiped out rag weed, the plant that is the principal source of hay fever.

Byrnes Makes Recheck Of U. S. Buying for War

Assistant President James Byrnes is making a reexamination of all Government purchases of both civilian goods and war materials to be shipped abroad, it was learned yesterday.

Foreign commitments for food and oil are reported to be receiving particular attention. In fact, insiders predict the food-buying program for foreign consumption will be reformed as a result of the inquiry.

Fred Searls, former War Production Board official and Byrnes' adviser on war production, has been charged with making the inquiry. On his staff are Maj. Gen. Henry S. Aurand, commanding officer of the Sixth Service Command, and Sidney Sherwood, on leave from WPB. General Aurand spends half his time here and the other half in Chicago with his service command.

Purposes of the recheck are reported to be:

1. To see that each agency in the buying field sets up machinery to cancel immediately contracts for obsolete materials. It's reported that Byrnes' office has discovered parts being made for war materials that are no longer in use, among other examples of wasted effort. Byrnes, it's said, will demand that each of the war agencies set up adequate staffs to check material in production constantly to make sure that it's usable.

2. To get "frozen inventories moving and to cut back production on materials where there is a surplus. Tanks were an example. At one time thousands of tanks were piled up at Detroit waiting to be moved. Byrnes, it's reported, wants the stocks moved to the war fronts or else he wants contracts canceled or cut down.

3. A greater coordination of Government buying, particularly in food. Byrnes wants to prevent competitive bidding between Federal agencies. Duplicate orders also are being looked into.

Purchase programs in these agencies are being examined: War, Navy, Lend-Lease, Agriculture, Office of Economic Warfare, Office of Foreign Rehabilitation and Relief, Procurement Division, War Shipping and Maritime Commission.

LANDIS A DIPLOMAT?

James Landis, director of the Office of Civilian Defense, is dickering with the State Department for a foreign assignment. He'll probably be given diplomatic rank and be sent to Cairo. Lend-Lease also is interested in Landis . . . The Agriculture Department has asked Civil Aeronautics how it can borrow, beg or steal some planes. It seems that they are urgently needed to break up a black market in meat. Out in the great unprotected plain areas, Agriculture reports, ranchers are having cows slaughtered by thieves, who throw the carcasses in trucks and speed to the black markets. The Western ranchers are demanding planes to protect their herds . . . Civil Service has announced an examination for War Manpower regional director for the Washington area. The job pays $8000. Applications close on August 21. Acting director is Leo Werts . . . The real food czar is now Paul Porter, who has joined the White House staff. Jack Hutson may succeed Porter.

Four union officials who have members at Government Printing Office are dead set against the proposal—revealed here as being under official consideration—of placing GPO per diem employes under the Civil Service classification act. They are Marin Zuesse of United Federal Workers; Jesse Manbeck of the Typographical Union; Seaborn Jones of the Bookbinders' Union, and Raymond Roche of the Printing Pressmen. A joint statement says in part: "The desire to abolish the Keiss Act on the part of officials referred to in the Federal Diary column is not hard to understand. They are no doubt the same who, in their relationships with the representatives of their organized employes have not shown the least desire to have a 'meeting of minds.' This stubborn opposition to the heart and spirit of collective bargaining forms the basis of their opposition to the Keiss Act. They are required by law to bargain and they seek to avoid their responsibilities by destroying the law."

The statement goes on to point out that salaries of 40 per cent of the Federal workers are fixed by wage boards and the procedure has been useful and harmonious in other places. It suggests instead that the Public Printer extend the Keiss Act to the remainder of his office. Only 2800 are covered and 5092 are not. The GPO is accused of "becoming notorious for its disgraceful labor relations." To place the employes under the Classification Act, the statement said, would "intensify the already poor morale and the antagonisms in the agencies concerned as well as to provoke the anger of the labor groups elsewhere in the Government service who also function through wage boards."

Teachers Promoted

Promotion of two District teachers to the post of junior high school assistant principals, effective next Monday, was announced yesterday by the Board of Education. Appointed assistant principal at Langley is J. Anna Tennyson, a teacher there, while Eleanor P. McAuliffe, a teacher at Powell, will be the new assistant principal at Paul Junior High.

Laundries Seek Pay, Price Boost

Petitions Are Filed With WLB and OPA For Adjustments In District Plants

Seeking wage increases among Washington's laundry workers, and at the same time an increase in laundry prices, petitions have been filed before the War Labor Board and Office of Price Administration, it was learned yesterday.

The Laundry-Dry Cleaning Association, which sponsored both petitions, has been preparing them for several weeks. It was estimated that $10,000 in wage increases would be obtained should the WLB pass favorably on the petition, which according to plan will not become effective unless the OPA petition to raise prices is favorably acted upon.

With the increase in wages anticipated, the laundry association announced it would then be willing to comply with the ruling made recently if the area War Manpower Commission would refrain from recruiting workers until standard wages of 40 cents an hour or more were paid.

It was estimated should the petitions be granted laundry workers would secure an average weekly increase in salaries amounting to $2 to $2.50 a week by all employes.

The laundry association estimated about 90 per cent of the District's 5000 laundry and dry cleaning workers would be affected by the granting of the petitions.

Long a vital problem in Washington's daily life, and yet far from solved, the laundry industry has run into increasing difficuly during the past months.

Early in June upon an emergency call Area WMC Director Fred Z. Hetzel set the manpower office and the local United States Employment Service office into action and secured 250 emergency workers within three days.

Hetzel later informed the laundries unless they paid workers standard wages, a WMC ruling prohibited him from recruiting workers.

Edwin Wesley, association chairman on wage and price increase, was in New York yesterday to file the petition for the price increase at the OPA regional office there and the petition was presented to the WLB yesterday, according to George N. Walker, executive secretary of the association. Walker accompanied Wesley to New York.

74 Soldiers Become New U. S. Citizens

Naturalization ceremonies for 74 soldiers from nearby camps were conducted yesterday before Justice T. Alan Goldsborough in District Court.

In addressing the men after they swore allegiance to the United States, Justice Goldsborough said:

"As long as people are allowed to say what is in their heart, democracy is safe. Freedom of speech, press and the secret ballot are three things which in this country we have to a higher degree of perfection than in any country, including Great Britain."

"It depends on you and other young men to preserve those privileges which have given so much to human happiness. You are tremendously fortunate. Many of us, because of nature, see the sun setting—you see it rising."

The soldiers were from Fort Belvoir, Fort Ritchie, and posts in Washington and Alexandria. They were natives of 15 countries.

Alfred Kahn, Ralph A. Harrison, Brovsky Saghatelian, Ignacio L. Melendrez, Henry E. Eckstein, Joseph Letters, William Chester, Earl H. Delano, jr., Kurt Abraham, Joseph E. De Gernier, Frank Principato, Karl H. Diehl, Winston P. Warner, Werner Loh, Ewold G. Schlegel, Hans R. Laue, Nicholas Karelson, Erwin Leissner, Henry P. Korn, Fred Bender, Robert J. Beard, Erlic C. OWI News Bureau Chief Resigns Post

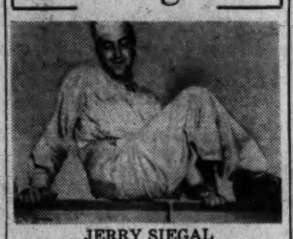
George Lyon disclosed yesterday that he had resigned as chief of the Office of War Information news bureau, one of the few OWI divisions which escaped virtually unscathed from Congressional economy knives.

Associates said that Lyon had been ill recently because of pressure of work and desired to take a rest. It was understood that OWI officials were making an effort to persuade Lyon to reconsider by substituting a vacation or leave of absence for his resignation.

Feats Needed

Superman's Creator Now Pvt. Siegal



JERRY SIEGAL

Superman is a buck private at Fort Meade, Md.

This was disclosed yesterday when Jerry Siegal, creditor of Superman, was discovered as a member of the Thirty-ninth Special Service Co. at the Maryland military post.

But, Siegel admitted wistfully, the fact that Superman is vicariously in the Army doesn't help him one bit in meeting the challenges of Army life.

He Can't Do Those Things

For one thing, Jerry said, he cannot, like Superman if he wanted to, scoop out foxholes with his bare hands in a few seconds. He has to use a trenching tool. Nor can he emulate his powerful, horizon-striding pen and ink protege by airily tossing a 60-pound pack skyward with the flip of a finger.

In fact, Jerry declared, the only resemblance between him and Superman is their age. Both are 28.

He could use Superman to advantage, Jerry said, in lessening kitchen police tasks by Superman tricks with dishes and potatoes.

Sadly, however, Jerry said he will get no help from Superman. When buddies pestered him by asking when Superman will go into uniform, he replied, "never." That is "never" unless he gets advanced information when the war will end.

Might Hurt Child Morale

If Superman got into the Army, he explained, it might prove disastrous to child morale. The children now having faith in Superman's ability to solve any problem. To them, apparently, Superman could take out the Nazis and the Nips as a rest period between more spectacular exploits. With a dimmed reputation, his power to influence children for good would be lost, Siegel held.

Jerry's induction into service will not affect The Post's comic strip for some time. He revealed he was ahead on continuity when inducted, and now has a staff of script writers exploring ideas he gave them.

But, Jerry is less worried about Superman than himself. Superman, he implied, can get along, while he, Jerry, now spends most of his time learning how to be a soldier.

Restaurant Man Guilty; Hit Official

Court Convicts Owner Who Beat D. C. Inspector On Health Tour

A restaurant operator was convicted yesterday by a Municipal Court jury of assaulting a health inspector who was attempting to examine the restaurant for possible violations of the sanitary code.

John L. Suber, described as coproprietor with his wife of a restaurant at 1927 14th st. nw., was charged with pummelling Health Department Inspector John C. Easoon, jr., in an effort to stop him from entering the basement of the restaurant.

On Routine Inspection

Eason testified the assault occurred July 29 during a routine inspection. Suber denied striking Eason, stating that he "merely shoved" Eason because a waitress was in the basement changing her clothes.

Suber will be sentenced by Judge George D. Neilson on August 20.

In his closing argument to the jury, Assistant United States Attorney Joseph Lawless said:

"At this time when the safety of the Nation's Capital depends at least in part on maintaining sanitary conditions, it is especially important that restaurant owners cooperate in every way with the health department. But Suber sought to thwart the health department in its work."

Two Others Accused

Ellis Levy, grocer, of 1018 North Capitol st., forfeited $25 yesterday when he failed to appear in Municipal Court to answer charges of having broken glass in two meat cases, meat unfit for human consumption, rusty meat hooks, dirty icebox and maggots on a meat block.

Elmer W. Howerton, 929 10th st. nw., was fined $25 on a charge of having a restaurant with dirty floors, walls, ceiling, all needing repairs, kitchen infested with roaches, dead flies in ice box, a dirty stove and mixed trash and garbage in boxes in the kitchen.

Woman Penalized Bunch of 13s on Friday the 13th

—And the judge said only superstitious people believe Friday the Thirteenth is unlucky.

Mrs. Sharon Ruth Hastings, 29, whose address is 1313 13th st., was charged before Judge Nathan Margold in Municipal Court with shouting threats at a neighbor, with being drunk in a house at 1313 13th st., and with assaulting her girl friend.

On the threat charge, Mrs. Hastings was given 13 days to move out of the neighborhood.

On the drunk charge, she was given a $13 fine or an alternative of 13 days in jail.

On the assault charge, Mrs. Hastings was lucky. It was dismissed because her girl friend had a change of heart.

Sea Veteran of War Recovers $400, but Loses His Suitcase

By Emily Towe
Post Staff Writer

The shock of battle that came to Alvin E. Tunison when his transport ship faced fire in the Sicilian invasion July 10 was mild in comparison with the way he felt in Washington upon loss of his wallet with $400 earnings of five months at sea.

The sailor, who had big plans for his seven-day leave here, met one mishap after another in the Capital. However, the ending of his story yesterday was a happy one—almost. He found the wallet with the money, carefully saved for a family reunion during weeks when he sometimes wondered if he'd ever return to spend it.

Ill Luck Continues

But his suitcase, misplaced after the billfold, is still at large and plans for a visit to see the homefolks in Youngstown, Ohio, and Madison, Ill., are shattered.

Tunison, a seaman first class with freckles and a shy smile, admitted frankly he nearly collapsed Wednesday night when he realized his loss of the wallet. Yesterday's surprise of finding it through Travelers Aid—after he had completely given up hope—was an even greater shock.

"I was on my way to see a sister in Youngstown, Ohio. There was a stopover here for a few hours Wednesday night. After eating a bite at a lunch counter near the station, I was taking a look around the town. About 2:30 Thursday morning, a fellow saw I was kinda lonesome and asked me to his boarding house for a drink."

A Sociable Evening

The sociable civilian was Donnelly James, a distant cousin of the band leader who also plays the saxophone at the Lee Sheraton Hotel at night after working as a Government accountant for eight hours each day. They went to James' home at 1215 K st. nw.

"I had to rush back to the bus station to catch my 3 a. m. bus," Tunison continued. "But just as soon as we had pulled out of the station, I knew my wallet wasn't in my pocket. Jumping out right away, I completly forgot my suitcase. I retraced my steps as far as possible but had completely forgotten James' name and home address."

The rest of the night was passed miserably on park benches with the sailor nearly frantic over the failure of his dreams of a family reunion to materialize and the loss of money earned as a second gunner on his troop transport. Early the next morning, he reported at a receiving station, explaining that his leave papers and identification had been misplaced along with his earnings. He remained there throughout the day.

Resigned to his ill-luck, Tunison went back to the bus station yesterday morning with the hope that at least his bag left on the outbound bus might be found. The baggage clerk informed him that Mrs. Clara McDaniel at Travelers' Aid wanted to see him.

His Greatest Shock

Mrs. McDaniel recognized the sailor by his photograph in the billfold that had been turned in by James. As she handed it to the perturbed young man, he guiped, bit his lips, trembled. Buddies had fallen when bombs struck his ship off the shore of Sicily. Then he had stood by his gun. But yesterday's shock was a new experience.

Laughing later over his turmoil in Washington, Tunison said: "I rushed to the postoffice to send my money to my sister. I couldn't get there myself because there weren't enough days left but at least I won't lose it again."

15,000 Witness Highly Realistic Demonstration Of Vital Civilian Defense Tasks in Air Raid

Griffith Stadium Area Resounds With Bombs and Ack-Ack

An estimated 15,000 who attended, and countless thousands of others in the mid-city area, know from first-hand experience what an enemy air raid would be like as a result of the demonstration last night at Griffith Stadium, put on as a climax to the drive to recruit volunteer defense workers. So realistic was the demonstration, and so powerful were the bombs, concussions were felt beyond the limits of the stadium.

The show began when a lone bomber at great height, and under the lazy moon, was sighted and picked up by powerful searchlights manned by an antiaircraft unit. In a few seconds Army antiaircraft guns, which had been placed about the infield blasted away.

"School" Blown to Bits

Then a mock school building was blown into the air and wardens rushed to the aid of "dead and wounded," played by others already skilled in volunteer defense. Not content with this "damage," the enemy planes returned and this time other buildings were shattered.

A mock hotel burned. A "guest" jumped from the roof into an auxiliary fire net as the crowd gasped. Suddenly the "villian," his coat collar about his neck, darted away with an armful of loot. But auxiliary police soon got him and the crowd went wild.

A delayed action bomb, supposedly dropped from the plane, finally went off and scores of actors were floored. Others shouted "gas." Masks were brought into play and the announcer suddenly brought the multitude back to normal cheering when he said:

"If you get gas on your clothes, remove your clothes. There is no false modesty with mustard gas."

Parade Precedes Show

After the "worst" had been done, the buildings were wrecks and the plane had disappeared, spot lights were thrown on a 40-foot tall painting of the Capitol. There it stood, untouched. The crowd went wild and the band's playing of "The Star-Spangled-Banner" was hardly audible.

Previous to the demonstration a parade was held by the military and various defense services as the floodlights shone down on them. Professional entertainers, from Washington theaters, presented a show of their own and the Police Band gave an hour's concert as the crowd gathered.

Frank Smith, general chairman of the drive for recruits that began with the parade of two weeks ago, introduced John J. Hasley, chairman of last night's affair. Hasley said the drive has netted 4000 new volunteers but that 16,000 were still needed.

Servicemen's Facility Aided By Site Award

Swift construction of the proposed $325,000 center for transient servicemen was forecast yesterday as the Federal Works Administration was granted an order of possession in District Court for a site adjcent to the Capitol Park Hotel, facing Union Station.

Authority to take over the land, currently in use as a parking lot, was granted the FWA under the Second War Powers Act, Administrator Philip B. Fleming announced. FWA officials will meet Capitol Park Hotel Corp. heads immediately to ascertain whether the property will be sold outright or leased.

Precodure for acquiring the lot, which measured 112 by 110 feet, was filed in court to assure FWA of utmost speed in getting possession, it was explained. Contracts for the structure will be awarded today or tomorrow, with funds provided by the Lanham Act.

The building will be of the temporary design now in use on the Mall and will be two stories high, accommodating 250 enlisted men. Cots, lounge chairs, showers, wash rooms, a library, a canteen for food of the "snack" variety, and recreational facilities will be provided, aimed at giving quarters without charge to servicemen who normally would have to wait long hours at Union Station in between trains.

Nazis Holding D. C. Air Corps Officer Prisoner

Second Lieut. Thomas S. Mortenson, reported missing in action over the Ruhr Valley last month, has been listed as a prisoner of war held in Germany, the War Department announced yesterday.

MORTENSON

His wife, Nina Mortenson, War Department employe, who lives at 2022 Columbia rd. nw., was informed by the American Red Cross that Lieutenant Mortenson is now in prison camp Stalag Luft No. 3, located about 90 miles south of Berlin.

A graduate of the University of North Dakota in 1938, he came to Washington in October, 1940, where he served as a supervisor in the executive office of the quartermaster general. He enlisted in the Air Corps in January, 1942, and received his wings at Albuquerque, N. Mex., the following November. He was sent overseas last spring.

Mother Is Held As Home Burglar

Mrs. Julia King, of Hillside, Md., who police charge recently ransacked several homes in Southeast Washington, using her 2 and 4-year-old daughters as unwitting accomplices, was held yesterday by Judge Nathan Margold for grand jury action under $500 bond.

Police said Mrs. King, taking her children with her, entered several houses by slashing window screens, and carted loot away in a shopping bag.

Lotte Goslar Now in Capital, 'Intoxicated' With Life, She Says

Dancer to Perform Tonight, Tomorrow In Post's Concert

Lotte Goslar, comic mime who has danced throughout Europe and won acclaim of critics in this country, said yesterday upon arrival in Washington that she so much loves the joy of living that she had to express her ecstasy in a dance know as "Intoxication."

Miss Goslar, a diminutive, German-born dancer who fled the Nazi regime in 1933, will appear tonight and tomorrow night at 8:30 p. m. in The Post series of Starlight Concerts at Meridian Hill Park. With her will be Leon Varkas, well-known ballet dancer, Betty Lind and Patricia Gardner.

Large Stage Prepared

A large stage, 60 feet in width and 20 feet deep, has been constructed adjoining the regular platform for the two performances. Spectacular spotlights have been installed in trees near the front of the stage and a cyclorama has been erected as a background.

In an interview yesterday afternoon at the park, Miss Goslar said that her "Intoxication" dance was recently misinterpreted by clubwomen sponsoring her appearance in a small town. Disapproving of the name of Miss Goslar's own composition, they said it indicated a "state of inebriation."

"I am intoxicated—but not with liquor," laughed Miss Goslar. "I am in love with living every day, breathing free air, and the joy of becoming an American citizen."

Commenting on her role as a comic, Miss Goslar said she had always been fascinated by clowns. She often uses fantastic false noses and other make-up characteristics of professional funny men. And she likes to watch people as they file along the street to discover clownish features and expressions she can portray on the stage.

Never Studied Dancing

"I have never studied dancing," Miss Goslar continued. "I just danced. As a child, I slipped away from the room when my father played the piano to make my own improvisations. At that time, I was serious about it all. Later, I began to enjoy the lighter forms of dancing—the type that makes people laugh."

Tickets to the two concerts may be purchased at the Cappel Concert Bureau, 1340 G st. nw., and at the park boxoffice, for 55 cents, $1.10 and $1.65.

Service to 4 More States, 22 Cities Planned by P-CA

Pennsylvania - Central Airlines yesterday filed application with the Civil Aeronautics Board for extension of its operations into four additionall States and 22 cities in the East and New England.

P.-C.A. proposes to link its main terminal at National Airport with New York and Boston, contemplating service through Wilmington, Philadelphia, Trenton, Newark and New York, and thence to Boston via Bridgeport, New Haven, New London, New Bedford, Fall River, Providence, Attleboro Taunton and Brockton.

Another route would link New York with Boston through New Britain, Waterbury, Meriden, Bristol, Hartford, Springfield and Worcester, thus offering a network of air service across New England.

"The route we have projected," President Bedell Monro declared, "will bring about an integrated network of air transportation that will assure greater accessibility and communication to the people of this highly important area with New York, Washington, Philadelphia and the many other outlets served by P.-C. A."

City News in Brief

President Milton W. King also appointed Arthur R. Pilkerton, chairman of the committee on budget, James J. Hayden, chairman of the journal committee, and George E. McNeil, chairman of the library committee.

Seven Burglaries Solved

Incongruity of new tan and white shoes topping off an otherwise disheveled appearance of one of their numbers yesterday led to the arrest of six teen-age burglary suspects and the clearing up of seven Northeast section burglaries by police.

The oddly dressed character was taken into custody at 13th st. and Maryland ave. by Scout Car Officers D. B. Rowe and B. M. Dorsey, following report of theft of jewelry and the shoes from the home of Woody L. Wise, 1330 Holbrook ave. ne.

Asks for Paintings

Juan V. Tomadelli, the son of the fabulous "Count" Juan J. Tomadelli, the latter now serving a one to five-year jail term for using the mails to defraud a New Jersey 10-cent store manager of more than $500,000 in a remote-control electric light bulb deal, yesterday asked District Court to restore to him the controversial paintings which once belonged to his father.

Loew's Band to Play

Gas Switch Brings Fine To Two Men

Two men had to pay $25 in Municipal Court yesterday because one of them transferred two gallons of gasoline from his truck to the car of the other in violation of the Second War Powers Act.

Both men, Ausby Richard Lam, 28, of Colesville, Md., and Claud J. Weakly, 8109 Georgia ave. nw., pleaded guilty.

According to the charge, Weakly owned an automobile that Lam used to ride to work in. Lam was said to be a gasoline truck driver and to have met Weakly on August 2, telling him he had the extra gasoline. The gasoline was transferred, it was charged, in Brookland ave. ne. It was charged that Lam, in siphoning out the gasoline for Weakly, was illegally exchanging a rationed commodity without receiving ration coupons.

MAKE IT DO . . .

If you have a cocktail shaker which isn't in use, why not make it into a dressing table lamp? The Heisey glass cocktail shaker (at left) has been fitted with a feminine silk shade and an electric light adaptor and so makes a lovely decorative note for milady's dressing or bedside table. In the center, above, stands a memento of last Halloween. This brown glass cider bottle hid its light in a dark closet. But since it has emerged, been subjected to a soapy bath, fitted with an adaptor and crowned with an attractive flowered shade, it can proudly grace the finest pie-crust edged mahogany table. Wine decanters can also be transformed into lamps.. The one pictured at the right was made from a decanter of Sharpe crystal. Dressed in a ruffled taffeta shade of this kind it is appropriate for either living room or boudoir. An adaptor, light bulb and shade were all that were necessary for this transformation

NEW LAMPS FROM OLD

By Martha Ellyn

Have you a wartime "bag o' tricks"? You surely have if you are aiding the present-day need of conservation. "Look over the old, plan for the new" would be a good motto for every homemaker to put into effect.

Martha Ellyn

The ability to reclaim and put back into use many household articles which otherwise would be gathering dust in attics, providing feasts for moths and taking up storage space, is a contribution to the war effort.

If you don't feel adequate to reclaiming furniture by making repairs, applying new finishes and putting on new upholstery, you can still successfully refurbish other items which every home needs, both for decoration and utility.

Do you have an old, lovely colored jug, a glistening pair of glass decanters or an interesting oil lamp; an exquisite vase which you would like to display in your home, but there's no room now for extra decorative objects?

Well, the trick from your bag this time can be to shine up the lovely object and make it into an attractive lamp. Don't throw up your hands—it can be done easily and successfully.

Make use of the ingenious stopper-like adaptors for electrical fixtures now available in some of the shops. You can make use of any decorative bottle or narrow-necked vase you happen to like, by filling the stopper-like adaptor into the neck as you would put a cork in a bottle.

Metal lamps, as well as those made of many other materials, are not to be found in the usual wide selection. This is because of the materials being needed for the manufacture of war supplies.

But brides will be needing lamps. Why not transform some lovely unused object into a wedding gift? It won't take much creative ability. First, decide upon the object you want to convert into a lamp. Then shine it up fine just like a new dime. It may need just a good sudsing. It may need polishing. If it is at all practical, take it with you to the shop and have it fitted with both adaptor and a shade. If you can't carry it to the shop, then learn the exact size of the opening and then get one to fit it.

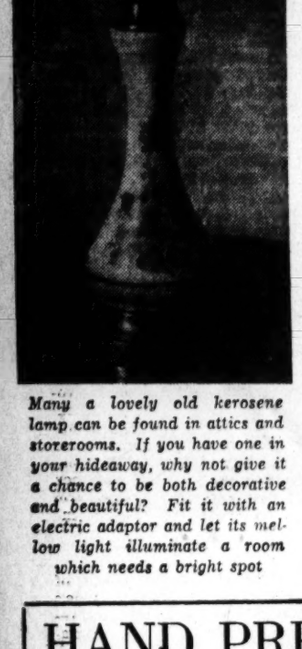
If the old lamp, vase, decanter, water bottle, or whatever you use to effect the electrical transformation, happens to have belonged to the bride or bridegroom's grandmother, Aunt Agatha or Uncle George, then it will have added appeal for the newlyweds.

You can still find an interesting selection of shades. Or perhaps you can rejuvenate an old frame with a new covering. Your problem will be: What, added to the base used for the lamp, will make the finished job most attractive?

Today are shown several items which were brought out of hiding and fitted to make lamps. Perhaps these will suggest things that you have stored away which can be converted to usefulness.

Lamps will need care to keep them clean and able to give the greatest amount of light possible. White-lined shades give the most light.

We will tell you where to find the "Aladdin-like" adaptors if you will call NAstional 4200, Extension 324.



Many a lovely old kerosene lamp can be found in attics and storerooms. If you have one in your hideaway, why not give it a chance to be both decorative and beautiful? Fit it with an electric adaptor and let its mellow light illuminate a room which needs a bright spot

HAND PRESSED

By Ruth Gregory

Attention: Girls in rooming houses, bachelors, travelers. Here's a way to keep your clothes in order in spite of overworked dry cleaning establishments, the dearth of traveling irons and inadequate hotel services.

Fingers were made before forks, so goes the old adage, and, similarly, the word "press" was born long before metal irons were introduced. If you can't get a dress or a pair of trousers pressed for love nor money, we won't listen to your lamenting, nor will we forgive that "crumpled look." Not when you can press your things with your own two hands.

Of course, this technique can't be applied to every kind of fabric. It won't work, for instance, on rayon crepe and smooth cottons, but it'll work on most lightweight woolens, on gabardines and spun rayons.

You simply spread newspapers on the floor of your room, place your dress face down on them, and smooth it out. (If the dress has pleats, better pin them in place.) Then take a large bath towel, wet it thoroughly and wring it out as dry as you can.

Place it over the dress and pat with your hands until the whole surface of the dress has evenly absorbed moisture from the towel. Reverse the dress and repeat the same process on the other side. Take away the towel and smooth out the damp fabric. Let it remain in place there overnight. In the morning that dress will look as if it had come from the most exclusive hand laundry in the city. And as a matter of fact, it has.

You can do the same thing with your slacks, with your husband's uniform when he comes to town on a three-day pass, or with his lightweight woolens if he happens to be a civilian. Or let him do it himself—easy enough for a child to master. The state of the crease in a man's trousers, silly or not, is still a strong factor in determining whether he's well groomed or not. That's why this little pressing trick can mean the difference between success and failure when a man has an important appointment.

Again you lay out the trousers on papers, dampening both legs with the towel. Place a piece of newspaper between the trouser legs and smooth out the fabric. Then take a book and smack the trousers along the crease lines. Coat sleeves take the same treatment and come out looking equally crisp next morning.

Plain pique dickies and collar and cuff sets are naturals for "hand" laundering. After you've washed and rinsed your collar, roll it up in a towel until the excess moisture is absorbed. Then place it over the edge of the bathtub or washbowl. Pat in out smooth, pull it back and forth. No one will know you pressed it without benefit of an electric iron.

People who used to speculate about the helplessness of the American, induced by his elaborate mechanical aids, can go bury their heads. We know how to get along.

The Gentler Sex

The Silver Lining

(A Wartime Picture)

Reading rooms in the public libraries are almost empty in midmornings. The oldsters who used to gather there to pass the long hours of purposeless days are now men of affairs, holding jobs, drawing pay checks.

Mothers-in-law are bustling to and from their day's work in store, office, restaurant, factory; too occupied with their own careers and new associations to worry over the weaknesses of their sons-in-law or the extravagances of their sons' wives.

Park benches are almost devoid of loafers staring dejectedly into space or looking for possible victims to panhandle. At last most of these flosters have a niche in life—working or fighting for Uncle Sam.

College graduates are coming home radiant faced with their first pay checks, and either finding their new jobs "perfectly fascinating" or pondering over which other opportunity would be the best to take. None are sitting home with mother. None are knowing the defeat and frustration of hopeless job-seeking.

Undergraduates and high school boys and girls are not loafing around the house trying to figure what to do with their time. They are busy as bees with their little jobs and have become responsible citizens earning the money for their school clothes, their bicycles and their movie cameras.

Housewives who have never known the freedom and self-respect of handling money of their own are now getting some of the things they have so long yearned for—a new couch to replace the old one with the sagging springs; enough new household linen so they will feel "safe" if company comes, or even a new dress or a permanent wave.

Girls and women who have led drab, meager lives are now reaching with eager hands and glorified faces toward BEAUTY—as exemplified in a cheap fur coat or some fancy black lingerie.

Debtors who have long had hanging over them the constantly oppressive thought of their obligations to others are now settling up unpaid bills, mortgage payments and taxes and are walking the streets with lighter steps and higher heads.

Doctors' and dentists' offices are crowded with those seeking at last the medical and dental attention they have needed so long and so hopelessly. Children with physical handicaps are having better futures made possible to them because their defects and maladies are being remedied.

Men who knew the humiliation of public relief a few years ago now walk with self-assurance. No longer are they failures in the eyes of their families or the public. Again they are the respected heads of their houses, the dependable providers, the strong oaks. Again their children may have what other children have; their wives hold up their heads among the neighbors.

Those who never knew the security of having money in the bank or a nest-egg for a rainy day now have become men and women of property. They look proudly on their growing accumulations of war bonds, at their books of defense stamps, and relax in the reassuring thought, "Now at last I have something under me."

Both youth and age have a spring in their step, a sense of importance in their movements. No time for loafing or meandering. They must be somewhere quickly, do something urgent that is waiting for them.

Nearly everybody able to work feels needed, responsible, secure. Nearly everyone knows the contentment of being busy. Nearly everyone is free of the nagging fear of losing his job—for if he does, there will be another one waiting. Nearly everyone, despite rushed and tiring days, has a sense of dignity as a productive and even creative human being. And for this seemingly simple and reasonable Utopia what price do we pay? The price of war!

Ethel Ernest Murrell Arrives in Capital To Pursue Equal Rights for Women in U. S.

By Genevieve Reynolds

Meet handsome Ethel Ernest Murrell, vice president of the Florida State branch, National Association of Women Lawyers.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

Her work on behalf of the married women of Florida has been mostly that of education. Since 1939 she has toured the State at her own expense to speak in every town and hamlet. Also, she has given innumerable talks over the radio. Eight Florida newspapers carried her column—all for the purpose of educating people as to the need of changing the archaic laws pertaining to women.

In 1940 she swung the Florida Bar Association behind the bill and was made chairman of the Committee of the Bar Association to rewrite the married women's laws of that State.

Efforts Extended

Once the bill was drafted she took it to the State Capitol in Tallahassee. Senator Dewey M. Johnson led the fight. Although it failed to pass in 1941, by that time the Florida Business and Professional Women's Clubs and the Florida Bar Association had thrown their weight behind this measure and it ceased to be a laughing matter.

Having laid the groundwork for a strenuous fight in 1943, Mrs. Murrell again went to Tallahassee early in the 1943 session of the Legislature. This time she had the backing of 53 individual organizations, four Statewide groups, including the National Association of Women Lawyers as well as the Florida State Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs. After a stormy session the bill finally passed both the House and Senate by a small margin.

MRS. ETHEL ERNEST MURRELL

Wife of a brilliant lawyer, Mrs. Murrell might have flitted her time away with bridge, teas, etc. Instead, the alert woman who hails from Cheyenne, Wyo., took up the cause of the Florida married woman. For eight or ten years she fought unceasingly so that they might have the right to manage their own property.

In town this week to confer with the members of the Woman's National Party, Mrs. Murrell expects to open up a National Speakers Bureau to popularize the Equal Rights Amendment now pending in the United States Congress.

"Women in Russia, New Zealand, China and Sweden have equal rights," said Mrs. Murrell, a vehement defender and exponent of the Equal Rights Amendment.

Answering the question—"But what about protective legislation?" She declared that Russia had the best maternity, pregnancy and protective laws for women. Also, the State of Wyoming which has both equal rights and excellent health laws.

"One hundred and fourteen discriminatory laws still exist in the United States," she asserted. "Women are limited citizens. While the men fight to spread democracy over the world we don't have it at home.

On Civilian Line

"Unless married women and single girls get a constitutional guarantee of 'Equal Rights' the victory abroad will be a mockery. After the war a reaction will set in and again married women will be ousted from their jobs."

Happy over the passage of the property rights bill in Florida, Mrs. Murrell says that men there already are talking repeal and unless constitutional rights are given there will be a fight every time the Florida State Legislature meets.

In addition to stumping for women by radio and personal lectures—she's a professional lecturer—Mrs. Murrell serves as chairman of the Air Raid Warden's Bureau and is an air raid warden herself. She says That Florida has dimouts all the time and frequent blackouts, which the people take very seriously.

Mrs. Murrell studied at Chevy Chase Junior College and at Miami University. She received her law degree from the latter.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Slumping is pernicious. It's a habit you get into for work and play. The trouble comes from not getting any change of activity. For example, after sitting all day on your job, you go to the movie, or to a bridge party, or read a book, and keep right on using the muscles you have been using for work.

In general, these are the small muscles. Using them for too long tires you out and builds up nervous tension but doesn't do a thing for your physical well-being. If your job demands great precision or concentration, this further builds up the nervous tension. You are more tired—and still without getting any exercise.

The solution for the sedentary worker is to pick the kind of recreation or exercise—if it must boil down to that—in which the action muscles not used on the job get their due. Some kind of sport is pleasanter. Swimming, hiking or doing anything that gets you into spirited action is a nervous outlet and physical workout.

If you do not have the chance for playing at games regularly, your second best bet is a simple set of calisthenics. Since you sit all day, it is a good idea to take some of these standing, and some in a countergravity position.

One way to reverse yourself for a good workout is to lie on your back on the floor, hips close to the wall, legs tsraight up the wall. First, pull up and in with the lower abdominal muscles and push the small of the back flat against the floor. This should result in at least a half-inch elongation through the trunk. Then, keep that lower abdominal and back position, and swing one leg forward, then the other, bringing alternate legs—backs of knees as close to wall as possible—to rest against the wall. Do the exercie for only 10 counts.

Another good uplift and stretcher is to keep that position, on back on floor with hips close to wall, legs straight up wall, and "walk" the [illegible] knees are straight, with the body in slim alignment from [illegible] toes, then walk down again. That exercise counteracts gravity and pulls you slim. Repeat five times.

Stand up and run in place—lift alternate knees as high up to chest as possible, and strike a brisk pace. Fifty counts will probably do you. Then finish with an upstretch through the midriff and a bend to either side.

That's a short program, but enough to keep you from slumping.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Some pleas for help sound so emotional one knows the issue is a vital one in the household.

Here is a mother who writes: "Please, please, please give us a solution for a youngster who will not listen to correction and speaks while being spoken to. This answering back is getting the upper hand. Please help us nip it."

How old is this child? Boy or girl? One child or one of several? One is rather helpless to discuss any subject on the basis of so little information. Obviously, any child past 5 won't listen like a mute while you present only your side of a question. He has a side, too, and he'll burst in and express it, especially if he is going to be punished if he doesn't.

I have a feeling you don't listen to him. You do all the talking. Though you may feel justified, he has a right to be heard. When you've let him have his say, then have yours. Your viewpoint may change materially—and you won't have committed yourself to any definite course—when you have heard the whole story.

When you have examined the story, then act upon it; don't pussy-foot and evade the issue if it is clear some penalty is demanded.

This is the best I can do, on the evidence presented. But one must recognize that all parents tend to get very bossy with children and resent even one peep out of the small criminals when they are being arraigned.

Examine your own actions and words and methods of treatment to see how you may be driving the child to resentful, combative behavior because you won't listen to his side of it all.

Our leaflet, "Obedience and Punishment," discusses the whole aspect of this vexing question. It may be had by sending a 3-cent-stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred, in care of this newspaper.

SHOP AND RUN

By Marianne

It's no household secret, but maybe you didn't know that—

* * * *

You can get a grease spot remover that's so good you can watch the neighbor's boy leave fingerprints on the wallpaper without shivers running up your back. Doesn't leave a ring, either.

* * * *

You can get plastic drain stoppers to replace the long extinct rubber ones. They're really an improvement, too, as they don't corrode and they stay clean.

* * * *

You can get concentrated soap flakes for washing dainty things and they also remove stains such as lipstick, oils, ink, blood and many other stains.

* * * *

You can get a substance that keeps windows and glass from steaming up. Put thin coat of this over the bathroom mirror, on the windshield of cars, or on window glass. Keeps them clear as day.

* * * *

You can get snap-on screen patches for repairing holes in doors or window screens, and they leave no jagged edges.

* * * *

You can get paper dish cloths, to save your time and energy. Made of parchment cloth that can't absorb grease or dirt.

* * * *

You can get plastic wood to repair holes or dents in any woodwork. It gives a surface and body like wood. The wood comes in nine colors.

Capital War Wives Are Unsung Heroines

Helpmates Trade Comfortable Houses 'At Home' For One-Room Apartments in Swelter Here

By Marie McNair

There is much to be said for the plight of the thousands of men who have come to Washington to give their time and talents to the winning of the war. They are homeless creatures, many of them, overworked, harassed, impatient to get the job over with; to return to a life with some degree of normalcy.

They deserve sympathy, surely. But consider the other side of the picture—the wives who come to Washington with them.

Certainly Washington is not the pleasantest place to live right now. Overcrowded housing conditions; high prices; shortages in foods and other materials; the transportation problem aggravated by the presence of so many strangers who don't know where they're going or how to get there. And for this, plus a two room kitchenette apartment if they are lucky these war wives have given up old friends, a nice house "back home," a happy carefree life of bridge parties and country club dances.

"It's quite a life," says Mrs. Ethan Allen Peyser, wife of the director of the foreign division of the War Production Board, here from Seattle, Wash. And from Mrs. D. B. Kraiser, wife of an Army captain, also from Seattle, comes: "It's a full-time job just keeping house for my husband, and trying to make it a little more pleasant for the men who are here without their families. They are the ones who are really suffering, I think." Most acute problem for housewives is the housing situation.

Family Dinners Help the Lonely

"You find a house," continues Mrs. Peyser. "The first one we lived in was sold right out from under us. Then we had to find another one. There is also the matter of help. We women, who have not done our own work for years, have to brush up on our cooking recipes and household duties."

Captain and Mrs. Kraiser have reason to feel very thankful—and are. They were able to get an apartment at the Dorchester House only three weeks after they arrived in Washington. That was nine months ago and now they have their own things which they brought down from New York and are beginning to feel more or less permanent residents.

"The servant problem doesn't worry me at all," says Mrs. Kraiser. "I haven't even bothered looking for one because I love to keep house myself, seeing that everything runs smoothly and in order. We have acquired a great many friends and aquaintances since we moved here, most of them are friends of my husband, who are strangers here living in hotels without their families. I really feel sorry for them and I try to make their lives a little happier by inviting them for dinner as often as I can."

Although she was born in Seattle, Mrs. Kraiser, who was Miss Marie Wick before her marriage, is of Norwegian parents. She was sent to England to be educated and during that period spent her summer vacations and Christmas holidays with her grandparents in Norway.

One-Room Days Were Happy

I heard of another family who came here from New York, giving up a spacious apartment there for a one-room apartment here. There were four of them—Mr. and Mrs. and two daughters. The large living room was curtained off at the end where the children slept; the closet was turned into a kitchen and if a guest was invited for dinner, one member of the group was obliged to get up from the table whenever the maid emerged from her cubicle to serve.

Now, however, they have found a house; the Mrs. who has always been of the "helpless variety," has planted tomatoes in her tiny garden, the family retainer who was "leased" along with the house, relieves her of practically all responsibilities and yet she looks back on those unbelievable days as some of the happiest of her life.

Miss Bradley, John Sluder To Be Wed

The marriage of Miss Elizabeth Cabot Bradley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Bradley of Boston, and John Cochrane Sluder will take place Fridays, August 20, at 4 o'clock at the First Church in Boston. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Greenfield Sluder of St. Louis and the late Dr. Sluder.

The Rev. Charles E. Park will officiate at the ceremony and a reception will follow at the home of the bride's grandfather, Godfrey Lowell Cabot, on Beacon st.

Miss Bradley will have her sister, Miss Hannah Lowell Bradley, as her maid of honor and the flower girls will be Miss Marjorie Cabot, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Cabot of Washington, cousin of the bride-to-be, and Miss Ellen Glessner, daughter of Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. John Glessner of Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, niece of the bridegroom.

The best man will be the bridegroom's brother-in-law, Lieut. Comdr. John Glessner, and another brother-in-law, Hyatt Mayor of New York, will serve as an usher. Other ushers will be Samuel C. Davis and Charles E Claggett of St. Louis, and Dr. Daniel Catlin of New York. The bride's uncle, Thomas D. Cabot, will also serve as an usher. The bride's brother, Pvt. John Moors Bradley, in training at Fort McClellan, Ala., will be unable to get leave to serve as usher at his sister's wedding.

Mr. Sluder and his bride will make their home at 80 Beacon st., Boston, after September 15.

Adm. Beauregard En Route to California

Admiral A. Toutant Beauregard, former Naval Attache of the United States Embassy in Brazil, and Mrs. Beauregard, have returned to this country and have been at Miami, Beach, Fla. They are now on their way to Texas where they will make a short visit and will go from there to Coronado, Calif., to be with their daughter, Mrs. Porter S. Bedell, wife of Lieut. Comdr. Bedell who is now on overseas duty.

Mrs. Beauregard is the sister of Mrs. Joseph W. Mullally of Washington, the former Miss Norvell Munford.

Mrs. Sumner Welles In Bar Harbor

Mrs. Sumner Welles, wife of the Undersecretary of State, is in Bar Harbor, Me., and is expected to return early in September.

After Christmas Mrs. Welles will go to Palm Beach, Fla., to spend the late winter and early spring at the new home which Mr. Welles has just purchased from Mrs. Arthur Somers Roche, widow of the author.

Anne O'Connor Among Brides In Recent Ceremonies

Fritzi Crissman Wed to Lieutenant In Church of the Reformation

Lieut. Richard Lee Wollam, U. S. A., and his bride, the former Miss Anne Welby O'Connor of Washington, who were married recently in Atlanta, Ga., will visit Lieutenant Wollam's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clinton S. Wollam of Springfield, Ohio, before going to Southern Pines, N. C., to make their home.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Timothy James O'Connor of Washington. The ceremony took place in Christ the King Catholic Church with the Rev. J. J. Campbell officiating. The bride's gown was of white satin trimmed with lace and seed pearls and made with long sleeves and a train. Her tulle veil was held by a coronet of seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of white roses. Mrs. Robert Dwyer Cawley, who was her sister's only attendant, wore an aqua crepe gown and carried yellow roses. Lieut. Ray Hild served as best man. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of Lieut. and Mrs. Robert D. Cawley, brother-in-law and sister of the bride.

Epstein—Crissman

Now in Texas following their recent wedding in Washington are Lieut. and Mrs. Edward Epstein, jr., the latter formerly Miss Fritzi Hall Crissman, daughter of Mrs. Edwarda Kress Crissman of Washington and S. Steele Crissman of Johnstown, Pa. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Epstein of Atlanta, Ga.

The wedding was held in the Church of the Reformation with the Rev. Dr. Oscar Blackwelder officiating. Miss Evelyn Underwood was maid of honor and Lieut. Bart Cook of Chicago, the best man. An informal reception was held at the church following the ceremony and a wedding supper for the bridal party was given on the terrace by the bride's maternal grandmother, Mrs. Katherine Kress of Washington.

The bride attended Columbia Institute, where she majored in interior decorating. For the last two years she has been employed in the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts in the Navy Department. Lieutenant Epstein is a graduate of Georgia Tech and received his commission in the Navy prior to Pearl Harbor. On August 12 he was transferred to the Flight Training School at Hensley Field, Grand Prairie, Tex.

Chief Justice's Niece Is in Wedding Party

Mrs. Henry Mlott, niece of Chief Justice Harlan Fiske Stone, was the only attendant at the wedding on Wednesday of Miss Enid Mary Clements and Yeoman William Peter Bollman 3d of the Maritime Service.

The ceremony took place in the Lady Chapel of St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York, with Msgr. Francis X. Shea officiating. A small reception followed at the New Weston.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Hall Kane Clements of New York and her husband is the son of Mrs. Lucy Bollman, also of New York. Lieut. Leo B. Guela, jr., of the Maritime Service was best man.

Mrs. Dickinson Wed in Annapolis

The marriage of Mrs. Devaney Dickinson of Annapolis, Md., and Capt. Charles Corwin Ross, took place yesterday at the home of the bride on Maryland ave. Chaplain W. N. Thomas officiated at the ceremony.

Admiral and Mrs. Albert T. Church and Mrs. Dickinson's daughters, the Misses Mary Frances and Patricia Dickinson, were the only attendants.

Local Girl Is Wed to Army Officer

In a simple ceremony in the Cleveland Park Congregational Church yesterday, Miss Sarah Eleanor Leiserson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William M. Leiserson, became the bride of Lieut. David M. La Mar, AUS, son of Mrs. Samuel La Mar of Indianapolis, Ind., and Long Beach, Calif. The Rev. Walter G. Borchers, jr., officiated at the high noon ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length dress of white faille, cut on simple lines, a fingertip veil of illusion and a bridal bouquet of white roses completed her ensemble.

Mrs. Albert G. Sims was her sister's matron of honor and only attendant. She wore a dress of light blue chiffon with a matching illusion veil. Her bouquet was of pink roses.

Avery Leiserson, USNR, served his brother as best man, and the ushers were two other brothers, Ensign Charles Frederick Leiserson, and Pvt. First Class Mark W. Leiserson.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents at 3210 34th st. Assisting the hostess were Mrs. Austin Patterson, Mrs. John A. Best, Mrs. Earl Smith, Mrs. Oswald Schuette, Mrs. William M. Duffus, Miss Rachel Pickett, Mrs. Charles Jorgensen, Ensign Erma Nash, Miss Ester Johnstone, Miss Frances McReynolds, Mrs. Roland Shackford and Mrs. Austin Daigneau.

The bride was graduated from Antioch College in the class of 1940, and Lieutenant La Mar was graduated from Indiana University in the same year.

Anna Garber Is Bride of Rev. Galen Crist

Waynesboro, Va., Aug. 13.—Now on a brief wedding trip are the Rev. and Mrs. Galen Benjamin Crist of this city, who will make their home in Chicago, Ill.

The bride is the former Miss Anna Elizabeth Garber, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. D. E. Garber, and the Rev. Mr. Crist is the son of Mrs. Isaac Crist and the late Mr. Crist of Bridgewater, Va.

Their marriage took place on Tuesday evening at the Waynesboro Church of the Brethren, with the bride's brother, the Rev. I. J. Garber, officiating.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, chose for her wedding a gown of white satin made with a lace yoke and a full skirt ending in a train. Her net veil, fingertip in length, was caught in a coronet of old English lace, and she carried a white prayerbook.

Maid of honor was Miss Mary Garber, sister of the bride, who wore a gown of aqua georgette, fashioned similarly to that of the bride. Her arm bouquet was of salmon colored gladioli and asters and she wore flowers in her hair. Bridesmaids were Miss Lucy Crist of Washington, D. C., a sister of the bridegroom, and Mrs. H. Lawrence Rice of Chicago, Ill. Miss Crist wore a dress of pink georgette and carried pink gladioli and asters and Mrs. Rice wore yellow georgette with an arm bouquet of yellow gladioli and asters. They wore matching flowers in their hair. Paul Crist served his brother as best man. Groomsmen were Raymond Andes of Harrisonburg and William Garber.

Following the ceremony a reception took place at the home of the bride's parents. The young couple left after the reception for a brief wedding trip.

The bride was graduated from Bridgewater College, Bridgewater. The bridegroom also attended Bridgewater College.

Mrs. Bernard Nordlinger and her two young children have rejoined Lieutenant Nordlinger at their home on Chesapeake st., after a visit with Mrs. Nordlinger's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Greentree, at their country home near Richmond, Va.

Lucius Beebe's New York

The current date marks, approximately, the fifteenth year this reporter has been prowling the boulevards of Manhattan and the opera houses and hotel lobbies of suburbia in search of copy concerning the foolish way of life, and a few installments of this column are being devoted to his happier recollections of this decade and a half.

A Reporter Remembers:

The spun platinum blades of straw Mrs. S. Stanwood Menken had run up by Tiffany to wear in her hair at a costume ball where she was to appear dressed as a simple country maiden.

Lunch time at Jack and Charlie's on December 9, 1941, a few minutes after some Army publicist had announced over the radio that German air raiders were going to bomb the city within the hour. All the most fashionable folk, the Vincent Astors, Mrs. Larry Tibbett, Dwight Deere Wiman and all the society paragraphers jammed the premises in their newest and fanciest rigs, sure that the photographers would be present, and desirous of being blown to bits in their best Dache bonnets and smartest clothes.

When covering the opening of "Virginia City" at Virginia City, Nev., I was typing a wire story in the Western Union office when the report arrived that Tite's Opera House had fallen in and that scores of celebrities were killed or maimed. Knowing that Howard Barnes, from my own paper, was in the audience, I hastily cut my story to advise the telegraph desk in New York to get his obituary out of the files, and dashed up Eureka st., only pausing in the Crystal Chandelier Saloon to fortify myself against the horrors I should encounter at the scene of desolation. To my inestimable relief, there was Barnes hoisting a hod of red ruin with Johnny Harkins of Warner Brothers. The roof of Tite's had, to be sure, fallen in, but 10 minutes after the close of the performance, and there had been nobody in the building.

The incredible and hair-raising profanity of Richard Maney, the press agent, whose vocabulary is innocent of any least curse word or obscenity, but derives its effectiveness entirely from the sonorous rhythms of Elizabethan English.

The first time I ever had a highball in a London pub and the barmaid inquired would I have "splash or polly, please?" with my whisky. Having no slightest knowledge of the circumstance that she wanted to know if I wished seltzer or Apollinaris water, I timidly allowed that I'd like a little of both, if I might! I can still hear the homeric laughter of the other customers.

The most wistful souvenir of the old West, I have always thought, is the Hotel de Paris, built and for many years run in the silver boom town in Colorado of Georgetown, high in the hills above Denver, by French Louis du Puy. It stands to this day, haunted by the ghost of French Louis, who first brought fine food and wines to the mining towns in 1875, intact in Georgetown's Alpine st., a museum of mirrors and etchings, statues, ormolu, fountains, Limoges china and fragrant souvenirs of sheep's feet in sauce soubise, trout portugaise and other novelties of a frontier time. Of all the relics of all the ghost towns of Colorado, it is the most incongruous, most pathetic, most lonely, with the desolate hills rising behind its statued facade and its register a tally of the great names of the storied and wonderful West.

The dinner party arranged at the Savoy Plaza by Andre Simon for the organization of the American chapter of the Wine and Food Society, at which the master swooned when he discovered the management had laid a simple train of orchids down the center of the long table. "Throw wide the windows!" he cried. "Air the rooms! Is the bouquet of my wines to have to conflict with these stinking flowers?"

The night of the terrible Watts-Kirkland affair, when for a few minutes the front room at Bleeck's Artists and Writers' Saloon was indistinguishable from the Little Big Horn, the Bridge at Lodi or the latter phases of the Battle of Stalingrad. The incident was occasioned by Dick Watts' review of a seventh-rate outhouse charade waltzed up by Jack Kirkland, author of "Tobacco Road," and the next evening Kirkland made the tactical error of taking a pass at Mr. Watts in his home saloon. It was then that Mr. Watts discovered he had more friends than he had ever imagined, all eager to have at his attacker with boots, chairs, bottles and any adjacent blunt instruments. Bleeck himself, apprised of the massacre by the rebel yells and Ojibway screams which filtered into the back room, arrived with what is known in police circles as a sap, shouting as he came, "We don't allow overly intoxicated people in here, and no fighting, either!" Kirkland was as good as new a month later.

The night of the Louis-Schmeling fight, when all hell was scheduled to break loose in Harlem, whoever won. Surrounded by elaborate precautions, I escorted Evalyn Walsh McLean, Hope Diamond Star of the East, and all, to the fracas, after which we became separated from her detectives and wandered for hours in search of a taxi, with nobody saying so much as boo to us.

Driving one night through the desolate San Jacinto Mountains of California and discovering, miles from the nearest town or even filling station, a handsomely appointed and brightly lighted saloon whose wine list, liquor shelves and general set-up would have done credit to any metropolitan midst. "How," I inquired, "do you manage to support such a tony dump so far from any town?" "Oh," exclaimed the barkeep, "we open up just before the health farm up the road a-ways lets the inmates out for the evening!"

The sea trials, a number of years ago, of the Grace Line's new steamer Santa Barbara, recently sunk in combat in the Pacific. The press end of the affair was arranged by Cameron Rogers, then in charge of publicity for the line, and the 30 reporters, including Brick Terrett of the World and myself, hastened to attend on the promise that no fewer than a hundred cases of bourbon had been obtained from Boo-Boo Hoff, the leading Philadelphia purveyor of vintages at the time. It wasn't until we were well at sea that the hideous discovery was made that Hoff's bottling works had made a mistake and that we were stuck with a hundred cases of apricot brandy, and that it was all we would be able to get for four days!

Purely Personal

The Ambassador of Venezuela and Senora de Escalante have sent out invitations for a reception on Saturday, August 21, in honor of a group of visiting Venezuelan newspapermen. The 5-to-7-o'clock fete will take place in the embassy on Massachusetts ave.

Senator and Mrs. W. H. Hill and their daughter Shirley of Hilo, Hawaii, are spending several days at the Mayflower before leaving for a further tour of the country. Senator Hill, who is a member of the Hawaiian Legislature, and his family are making their first visit to the mainland since the Pearl Harbor attack.

Lieut. Comdr. Karl S. Herrmann is spending a few days in New York at the Fifth Avenue Hotel.

Among Washingtonians visiting Boston are Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Drayton, Leonard S. Mitchell, Lieut. M. J. Garrett, Joseph W. Berliner and Capt. O. H. Ritchie. They are all at the Copley Plaza.

Lieut. William E. Danley, USNR, and Mrs. Danley of Takoma Park, Md., have as their guest for a few days Mrs. Danley's mother, Mrs. M. A. Hannah of Tulsa, Okla. The Danleys, before coming to Washington, made their home in Oklahoma.

Miss Helen Ranberg of Argyle Park, Md., has left for Boston, Mass., where she will visit her uncle, Augustus Ranberg, for two weeks.

Among those from the Capital who have gone to the Homestead in Hot Springs, Va., are Lieut. Col. and Mrs. John L. Newbold, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. F. H. Higgins and Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Lester C. Simson.

Miss Loretta Yost and Miss Dorothy Souder of Silver Spring, Md., are in Ocean City, Md., for a week's stay.

Mr. and Mrs. David Stern and Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Kaufman will leave today for a vacation at Luray, Va.

Mr. and Mrs. Simon Eichberg and their sons, Jimmie and Johnnie, are spending several weeks in Ventnor, N. J.

Newlyweds Make Home In Virginia

Making their home in Arlington, are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas R. Yanosky, who returned recently following a brief wedding trip.

The bride is the former Miss Elizabeth M. Basista, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Basista, and Mr. Yanosky is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Yanosky. Their wedding took place in St. Matthew's Cathedral recently with the Rev. John Argout officiating.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white satin, and a fingertip length veil held by a coronet of orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of gladioli and stephanotis. Her only attendant was her sister, Miss Margaret Yanosky, and Raphael Petrush served as best man.

At Virginia Spa

Mrs. John Biddle and Miss Leia Meem Peachy have gone together to Warm Springs, Va., where they are spending the month of August.

Trained Aides Declared Need In Nurseries

Trained, professional teachers to supplement volunteer workers was cited yesterday as the most immediate need of day nurseries in the District and surrounding States by participants in a conference in the Departmental Auditorium on services for children of war-working mothers.

Lillian de Lissa, British authority on child care, pointed out nurseries in England average approximately 30 children each and are supervised by registered nurses. Youngsters are not congregated in larger groups because of the island's vulnerability to bombing attacks and also because of the danger of spreading infectious diseases, she said.

Dorothy Pearse, director of services for children under the Board of Public Welfare in the District, declared between 30 and 35 per cent of requests for aid here are for children under 2 years old. No Federal or District funds are available for those children, Miss Pearse said, although the Community War Fund has given considerable aid.

"Our main problem involves payment for care of children under 2," she asserted. "Foster homes are free to charge any rate they please and a year ago the average was from $5 to $6 weekly. Now, however, with the demand greatly increased, some foster homes charge as much as $12 to $15 for such day care, which is more than many working mothers can afford to pay."

Only solution, she asserted, would be the allocation of public funds for the care of younger children.

Biddle Believes Poor Housing Fosters Riots

Attorney General Biddle expressed the opinion yesterday that improper housing and recreational facilities for both Negroes and whites had been a contributing factor to the Detroit riots and "other racial or hoodlum clashes" in recent months.

Biddle said it seemed to him to be advisable, therefore, that responsible officials give careful consideration to the availability of such facilities before taking any steps to fill manpower requirements in already congested areas.

Biddle made his observations in a letter to Lester B. Granger, executive secretary of the National Urban League, New York City, who had written to express concern over statements attributed to Biddle in reports to President Roosevelt on racial problems.

Funeral Services For Capt. Lewis Held at Arlington

Military services were held at Arlington Cemetery yesterday for Capt. H. Turner Lewis, former secretary-treasurer of the Disabled Emergency Officers of the World War.

Captain Lewis, 55, made his home at Bluemont, Va. He died at Mount Alto Hospital Tuesday. He enlisted in the Army Signal Corps at 19. He was advanced from sergeant to first lieutenant in 1917, and to captain a year later.

Honorably discharged with disabilities in 1921, Captain Lewis began devoting his time to the cause of other disabled veterans. He was a member of seven veterans' organizations, the Masons and the Army and Navy Club.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Madge B. Lewis of Bluemont, and sister, Mrs. Leona Hauselt, Bradley Beach, N. J.

1000 Miners Strike When One Is Fired

Shenandoah, Pa., Aug. 13 (AP).—A work stoppage of about 1000 mine workers—the second in the anthracite fields since the Smith-Connally antistrike bill became law—closed three mines, a breaker and a stripping operation of the Locust Coal Co. today in a dispute over the discharge of a miner.

The suspension was voted yesterday by the West Mahanoy general mine board, which alleged "discrimination" in the dismissal. The company held that the miner carried cigarettes into a mine in violation of the Federal mining safety laws.

Brazil Security Police Head Praises FBI

Chicago, Aug. 13 (AP).—Dr. Plionio Brasil Milano, head of the Brazilian Federal Security Police, today said that the Federal Bureau of Investigation is "the finest organization of its kind I have ever known."

Dr. Milano spent 2½ months touring the country to inspect the FBI and other police methods.

Transfusion Alarm Found Overplayed

Fifteen-month-old Robert Houston Hovis 3d slept contentedly yesterday in his crib at Children's Hospital unaware that he had caused a 72-hour myriad heart alarm among baby-conscious Washingtonians and Virginians.

During those 72 hours the baby, struggling in the grip of streptococcus fever, had been the cause of the following:

(1) His father, at the hospital's request, telephoned friends to donate blood for an indicated "pick-up" transfusion.

(2) The friends, through his father, called other friends, until a not-insignificant percentage of Washington and Virginia phone traffic was being devoted to calls going out in his behalf on a sort of chain phone call method.

(3) A concerned Washington mother called a local radio station and requested that an emergency call be sent out in his behalf, Thursday night.

(4) The radio call sent 50 blood donors, within an hour after the broadcast, to the blood bank room of the hospital.

But, explained hospital authorities, there was no emergency in the life of young Bob. He needed a transfusion, but only a "pickup" to speed his throwing off the strep hold on him.

Yesterday, with Robert's temperature back to normal, the father, Robert Houston Hovis 2d, 121 Westmound drive, Alexandria, Va., was still seeking Type B blood donors. Hospital technicians found that the blood of nearly a score of persons who volunteered, while Type B, did not exactly match Robert's.

If an emergency does develop, which last night seemed remote, the hospital will call in professional donors. Of these the hospital has a sizable registration due to The Post's interest in sponsoring the hospital's blood bank.

Marine Captain Wins Cross for Hitting Jap Ship

Marine Capt. Martin B. Roush, 25, son of Mrs. Mahala L. Roush, 1314 Kenyon st. nw., has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for diving his torpedo plane over a Japanese convoy off Guadalcanal, and scoring a direct hit despite heavy anti-aircraft fire and fighter opposition.

ROUSH

Captain Roush, of Huntington, W. Va., was a second lieutenant at the time of the exploit, November 13, 1942.

The citation in part: "In the face of heavy anti-aircraft fire and fighter opposition, he fought with skill and courage, scoring a direct torpedo hit upon the enemy battleship."

More Comfortable Postwar Life Seen by Truman

Kirksville, Mo., Aug. 13 (AP).—Senator Truman (Democrat) of Missouri, looked into the postwar future today and envisioned a busy, prosperous land where the family car may cost $400 and life will be infinitely more comfortable.

Truman, chairman of the Senate War Investigating Committee, addressed the seniors of the Northeast Missouri State Teachers' College.

Some of the things Truman foresaw: A cheap automobile, made lightweight but not sacrificing room or comfort, by the use of aluminum, magnesium and plastics; helicopter travel no more dangerous than weekend trips on crowded highways; homes, schools, offices and automobiles equipped with television sets.

Miss Keller, Economist, Dies of Injury

Head injury suffered when she fell from a bicycle due to heat prostration on July 26 resulted in the death at Georgetown Hospital last night of Miss Marvel Keller, 38, a Government worker of 2909 Olive st. nw.

Cause of death was given as "brain hemmorhage." Miss Keller became a heat victim in the 1500 block of Wisconsin ave. nw., and passersby informed police who took her to Georgetown Hospital for treatment. At that time she responded to treatment and was released.

She was readmitted last Saturday when she complained of feeling ill and died at 8:20 last night.

Miss Keller was an economist with the Survey Standards Division of the War Production Board. She had been a resident here since 1934 and was the author of several books on economics.

She was a graduate of the University of Wisconsin and a native of Praire du Sac, Wis. Surviving are her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Keller of Praire du Sac, and a brother, Theon, of Madison, Wis.

The body will be sent to Wisconsin for burial.

Surviving are a sister, Mrs. Evelyn Fitzhugh Shafter, Waynesville; two nieces, Miss Agnes Fitzhugh Shafter, Waynesville, and Mrs. J. M. Dickerson, Montgomery, Ala., and three nephews, Fitzhugh Maclean, Takoma Park, Md.; Harwell Smith and Fitzhugh Smith of Montgomery, Ala.

Six New Elevators Asked For District Building

If the District Commissioners have their say the District Building's six dilapidated elevators are headed for the scrap heap with shiny new modern ones to take their place.

It all depends, of course, on whether or not Congress accedes to their recommendation that the 35-year-old lifts be replaced by others more modern. The decision was made yesterday to request the Engineer Department to determine the type elevator needed for the building and then to request Congress to supply the funds.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia. Miriam Taylor, 1518 North Carolina Ave. N.W., plaintiff, vs. William Taylor, Route 1, Landover, Md., defendant. No. 18786. The object of this suit is to obtain an absolute divorce on the grounds of two (2) years desertion. On motion of the plaintiff, it is this 12th day of August, 1943, ordered that the defendant, William Taylor, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided, a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post before said day. T. ALAN GOLDSBOROUGH, Justice. Attest: (Seal.) CHARLES E. STEWART, Clerk. By HILDA MARIE GOWEN, Deputy Clerk. 14.21.28

JOSEPH H. BATT, Attorney. Denrike Building (5).

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia. In re application of John Benjamin Jones, Margaret H. Jones, adults; John Raymond Jones, Margaret Elizabeth Jones, Martha Ann Jones, infants, by John Benjamin Jones, their next friend, for change of name. Civil Action No. 20749. Order of publication—change of name. John Benjamin Jones and Margaret H. Jones, adults; John Raymond Jones, Margaret Elizabeth Jones and Martha Ann Jones, infants, by their next friend, John Benjamin Jones, having filed a complaint for a judgment changing their names to John Benjamin Coon, Margaret H. Coon, John Raymond Coon, Margaret Elizabeth Coon, and Martha Ann Coon, and having applied to the Court for an order of publication of the notice required by law in such cases, it is, by the Court, this 6th day of August, 1943, ordered that all persons concerned show cause, if any there be, on or before the 6TH DAY OF AUGUST, 1943, why the prayers of said complaint should not be granted; provided, that a copy of this order be published once a week for three consecutive weeks before said day in the Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post. The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

DON'T BE SURPRISED if Admiral Howard Vickery, crack shipbuilder of the Martime Commission, quietly turns in his resignation in protest against the Navy.

Working closely with peppery, go-getting Admiral Land, Vickery has been the key man responsible for this country's phenomenal success in shipbuilding. But the current bickering over the fast ships he planned two years ago, and the Navy's attempt to take away the turbines made for these ships, has him down.

After Vickery arranged two years ago for a mass production of turbines, the slow-thinking Navy now wants to take over these turbines for Secretary Knox's much ballyhooed seven-ocean Navy to be finished in 1949.

Another fly in Vickery's ointment is the much-publicized William Francis Gibbs, brought to Washington by the Navy for the purpose of offsetting, if not stymieing, Vickery.

Though Gibbs has a great reputation as a naval architect (he is also an astute Wall Street lawyer), Vickery has run circles around him when it comes to ship design and planning.

Thanks to fulsome plugs in Time magazine, the public has come to think of Gibbs as the designer of the Liberty ship. Actually, the Liberty was designed 50 years ago by the British firm of William R. Thompson, Ltd., and has been used ever since as a British tramp. Its secret is a reciprocating steam engine (no turbine) which is easy to build. Gibbs slightly modified the ship for American war use.

Gibbs vs. Vickery

BACK BEFORE Pearl Harbor, when production of 11-knot Libertys first began, Admiral Vickery called in Gibbs and asked him to handle the procurement and production of 100 faster ships. Gibbs wanted so much money for the ships (around five million dollars above expenses) that Vickery took the job away from him.

Gibbs is not sore at the Navy, however. From the Navy he gets around nine million dollars worth of business annually. For the Navy he maintains 2000 draftsmen in his huge offices near the Battery in New York.

So Gibbs has now been brought to Washington by the Navy, plus the War Production Board, plus Bernie Baruch, to act as adviser in the important question of whether the Maritime Commission should build fast ships or whether the turbines which Vickery planned two years in advance, shall now go toward Secretary Knox's 1949 Navy.

NOTE—Admiral Vickery, disliked by Navy brass hats, is a Republican, but has been promoted and pushed by Roosevelt. He and Admiral Land, also a Republican, have worked closely together ever since they were in the Navy's Bureau of Construction and Repair.

Fredric March—Banker

FREDRIC MARCH, star of "The Skin of Our Teeth," has been wondering what the Manpower Act might do to him if Chairman McNutt ever got too technical.

For, technically speaking, March is still employed by the National City Bank. He joined the bank 22 years ago after graduating from the University of Wisconsin; but was taken sick, got a leave of absence, which has never been revoked, and then took up his present career on the stage.

Cox Persecution Committee

Congressman Cox's spite investigation of the Federal Communications Commission continues to reach amazing lengths in flouting established legal procedure. Latest flouting of the law is to cross-examine witnesses without any member of the Cox Committee present.

Actually, a congressional investigation is supposed to be what it says—an investigation by Congress. Congressional members of a committee are supposed to be present and do the job themselves. But since other members of the Cox Committee apparently regard this as a personal vendetta by Cox against the FFC (the FCC accused him of taking an illegal lobbying fee), they don't come around to many hearings.

The other day, for instance, Lucien Hilmer, former assistant general counsel of the FCC, was called before the alleged Cox Committee. When he arrived, he found two paid minions of the committee, Fred Walker and Ernest Hauser, but no Congressmen. So when they attempted to give him the oath, Hilmer refused.

"This subpena is returnable before a committee of Congress," he said, "and no Congressman is present."

So after some embarrassed telephoning, Chairman Cox arrived. He tried to make Hilmer swear that he would tell the truth to the "Committee or its agents," but again Hilmer refused. He pointed out that he was supposed to testify before the committee, not before its agents.

So Cox finally gave him the correct oath, and sat for a few minutes while Hilmer testified. Then apparently bored with his own inquisition, the little Georgia Congressman departed.

As soon as he stepped out of the room, Hilmer stopped testifying. So after more scurrying and telephoning, Congressman Louis Miller, St. Louis Republican, arrived. But he also was either busy or bored, and refused to stay to hear Hilmer testify.

So from 2 p. m. until 4 p. m. Hilmer had to sit, twiddling his thumbs, waiting for the Cox Committee lawyers to drum up another Congressman. Finally at 4 p. m. they got Miller to come back.

That is just one example of how Cox's "persecution committee" is operating.

Silver-Tongued Smith

Oratorical Gerald L. K. Smith, late of "Share-the-Wealth" fame, spent a quiet weekend in the Capital recently, lining up his forces for the 1944 campaign. Now head of the recently organized America First Party, Smith boasts that he holds the balance of power in Michigan, Ohio and Indiana.

Smith says his political party is the "Spare Tire Party." In case both presidential candidates next year "blow up" on foreign issues, his party will "come to the rescue of the country."

NOTE—With Mr. and Mrs. Smith during their Capital visit was Mrs. Lundeen, widow of the former Senator, who spends her time on Mid-West speaking tours building up the America First Party. Her husband's speeches on isolation were written by George Sylvester Viereck, recently convicted as a Nazi agent.

About the Showshops

'This Is the Army' Packs Them In; Items of News

By Marjorie Kelly

The Earle Theater yesterday morning found itself driven, albeit willingly, to do an unprecedented thing. Crowds waiting to see "This Is the Army" queued all the way around the corner of 13th and E down to 12th st. by 10:15 a. m. The house was scheduled to open at 10:30, with the first show beginning at 11 a. m.

Instead they opened the house at 10:15 and began the first show immediately, 45 minutes early, and called up the musicians, the Messrs. Ladd Lyon and Garfield Swift, and all the Roxyettes to get them down in time for the first stage show.

And at 1 o'clock the lines again stretched around the corner and down to 12th st. We could have predicted it, now we consider. It's that kind of a show.

A minor but very well-done role in "The Constant Nymph" now playing at the Metropolitan Theater in its third downtown week, has been rewarded by a starring role in a forthcoming Warner Brothers picture. The picture is "Janie;" the little screen newcomer who will play the title role is Joyce Reynolds, who played Joan Fontaine's sister in "C. N." Petite Miss Reynolds, who still attends classes at U. C. L. A. when she isn't making pictures, is under contract to Warner Brothers, and has previously appeared only in "George Washington Slept Here." The Brock Pemberton production of "Janie" is still S. R. O. on Broadway. It was bought a few months ago by Warner Brothers who outbid a couple of other major studios.

Mr. John Montague, agent of the "Arsenic and Old Lace" company, thinks you ought to know that although this is the third visit of "Arsenic and Old Lace" here, the mail orders coming into the box-office indicate that it will be as successful a visit as the previous ones. The current price range is lower than it has previously been and may account for the rush to get tickets.

Lindsay and Crouse plan to keep the play on the boards until the release of the film, which has been set back to next April.

Natalie Core, charming leading lady of "East Lynne" the old imperishable which continues, week in and week out, to delight the audiences on the Willard Roof, has an interesting sidelight on her contribution to the Floradora Sextette in the olio which accompanies the show—or should we say which the show accompanies? Anyway, Natalie informs that in 1904 her mother, then Mildred Hoyle appeared in the "Floradora Sextette" at Dana Hall, a girls' finishing school just outside of Boston.

Now, 40 years later, her daughter is singing the same answers to "Tell Me Pretty Maiden."

LEONARD LYONS

On Salvaging Scrap

The proverbs say that fools rush in where angels fear to tread, and that the shoemaker should stick to his last. I don't know what proverbs there are about the man who agrees to try his hand at writing a newspaper column when his sole knowledge of that art, to date, consists of some experience in being on the receiving end of various columns. Perhaps a new proverb will presently be coined to meet the situation.

DONALD M. NELSON

At any rate, it is a new experience for me to look down a column from the conductor's end, so to speak. Unfortunately, Leonard Lyons did not think to tell me where he left that strange combination of crystal ball, microscope, telescope and X-ray machine which all newspaper columnists must use to compile their material. I am sure there is such a thing; there just isn't any other way in which columnists could manage, not merely to describe things before they happen, but occasionally to describe things that don't even happen at all. However . . .

Since I can't hope to compete with the columnists in their own field, I think I shall confine myself to writing about something which I really know something about: scrap, and the salvaging of scrap.

The junkyard is, to all intents and purposes, an above-ground iron mine. Like all mines, it is supposed to have in it a good deal more ore than is being taken out of it at any given moment. Therefore, when you pass a junk yard, an auto graveyard, or any similar institution, and see big piles of rusty metal lying there looking as if nobody had touched them since the administration of Grover Cleveland, don't rush to the conclusion that the salvage campaign has come a cropper.

The stuff is supposed to be piled up like that. That big pile means that the drive is working, not that it has bogged down. The junkyard is a mine, and no sensible miner strips his ore-body down to zero in one day. There has to be a reserve stock on hand—and don't get worried by the fact that the reserve, in a junkyard, can look awfully idle and forgotten. Everything is under control.

Our scrap collection drives have brought in some diverse items. These range all the way from Japanese Samurai swords, given without the approval of the original owners, to old Civil War cannon; from courthouse statues to the battleship Oregon; from old bridges to front door keys; from a private yacht to a pair of steel arch supports. Once in a while excessive zeal has raised problems.

One group of youngsters picked up and carted off all the manhole covers in a street; another lad unhooked the door of his father's furnace and took it to the junkyard; still another, getting a little mixed upon his metals, took engraved silver plate from his mother's dining room sideboard and tried to turn it in to a dealer in old iron. I sympathize with the people who were inconvenienced through this excessive zeal, of course—but somehow I'd rather see too much enthusiasm on this proposition than too little.

HEDDA HOPPER

Same Mae, Only More So

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 13.—Never a dull moment on the De Mille set. He exploded in the morning—at least his set did. I saw the result in the afternoon. There was Signe Hasso in a blonde wig, as a nurse. I didn't recognize her. Some of the best-looking wounded men — one named Mel Francis, actually one of the wounded Dr. Wassell cared for. He was on the Marblehead. One leg injured. I noticed writing on the other leg. De Mille said, "Take another look at it, Hedda. He's got the name of every port the Marblehead made tattooed there." And sure enough, there was tattooing almost from knee to ankle. De Mille says he's one of the best natural actors he's ever come across.

CECIL B. De MILLE

Perennial Beauty

When you see Mae West in "Tropicana" you'll wonder why she's been kept off the screen so long. Same old Mae, only thinner and sexier. Heard a cute one about her from the man who makes up her income tax return. When it was done she asked what his hobby was. He said "Flowers." That was a little hard for her to take. He said "I live in a hotel—have one beautiful window box always filled with flowers." So she sent him a huge box filled with bulbs and a note: "I hope they'll come up to see you some time."

Come On—Give

Wonder why Harry Cohn won't give his consent to Jinx Falkenburg going overseas with Al Jolson. He gives her nothing to do, and Tex McCrary is impatiently waiting for her to come over so they can be married. Jinx was promised a good part in "Cover Girl." She got a guest appearance. Think of the cheer she'd get from our boys on foreign lands. Why, they might even cheer Cohn! . . . Mitch Leisen had to send to Minneapolis for dogs he needed in "Frenchmans' Creek." They're King Charles spaniels—cute as Christmas. I've never seen one before. Faces look Pekinesey, but they have long, lanky legs. Minneapolis is only place in the country where they're bred.

Metro won't lend Walter Pidgeon. They have enough jobs lined up for him to take care of 10 Pidgeons.

Gets Star Rating

But the best actor on any De Mille set is De Mille. We started talking about Russia. He said, "I made a trip there some years ago. They treated me like a blooming hero. I was curious which one of my pictures they liked best. Was it "King of Kings" or "The Volga Boatman?" They hadn't seen those. It was "The Godless Girl" —only picture I was ashamed of. It had been running eight months. They deleted entirely the last reel. The girl was godless—no regeneration in the picture at all. "We sold it for $7000. They made two million" . . . Then De Mille gave me the eye and said, "I don't know whether it was the giant squid or you, but 'Reap the Wild Wind' was the most successful picture I've ever made—also topped all of Paramount's. Maybe you better be in this one just for luck!"
